Navy Discipline

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

A proposal that the Navy Department take over the operation of the American merchant marine and induct its officers and seamen into uniformed service has been made to the White House, it was learned yesterday.

President Roosevelt, it was added, has instructed the Navy to study the legal problems involved and to make a further report to him.

Under the Navy Department plan, crews of American cargo vessels—between 50,000 and 75,000 men—would be given the opportunity to enlist and would then have the same status and pay as all other Navy personnel in similar grades. After the plan was put in effect, all vessels would be operated directly by the Navy and would be subject to its discipline.

Adm. Simons Indorses Plan

For several weeks, high Navy Department officers have been favoring the move, although the first public intimation came last Wednesday when Rear Admiral Manley H. Simons, commandant of the Fifth Naval District, indorsed such a proposition made by Gov. J. M. Broughton of North Carolina.

The projected step will be vigorously opposed by maritime unions and shipowners. Opinion in the Maritime Commission, which is now charged with supervision over manning the merchant ships, appears to be divided. Officials admitted knowledge of the project but declined to discuss it.

The Navy has charged that there has been failure by cargo vessel crews and officers to obey Navy orders and that the discipline of the crews, afloat and ashore, is inadequate.

Crews Difficult to Find

Another source of irritation has been the difference in pay between Navy sailors and unlicensed personnel on privately-owned ships. The latter enjoy higher rates.

Despite this fact, merchant vessels have had increasing difficulty in obtaining full complements of personnel and the Navy plan is proposed as a remedy.

Maritime unions, however, have declared that the shortages are in

132,000 Participate In Egg-Rolling; Heat Leaps to 91

Denied admission to the White House lawn because of the war, an estimated 132,000 Washingtonians descended upon the Capitol's west lawn, 39 playgrounds and the Zoo yesterday for traditional egg-rolling festivities.

The heat—91 degrees at 4:30 p. m.—was almost intense enough to cook eggs any fashion, but the children didn't mind; and their parents just lolled in the shade enjoying the spring weather when they weren't breaking up egg throwing battles or hunting for children who strayed.

Police estimated an attendance of 10,000 children and adults on the Capitol lawn, 22,000 at the Zoo and 100,000 at the playgrounds.

CONSOLATION—Mrs. M. T. Clark kisses her policeman-husband, wounded last night in gun battle.

A civilian was fatally wounded last night in an exchange of shots with policemen during an attempt by the police to disarm and arrest him.

One of the police officers and a bystander were struck by bullets. The battle occurred at 9 p. m. at Fourth and E Streets Southwest.

T. L. Davis, 35, Negro, of 309 F Street Southwest, was punctured at least six times by a fusillade of police bullets after he answered a police order to drop his pistol by firing a shot. He had been threatening other civilians with a revolver, according to police.

Davis was taken to Providence Hospital, where a blood tranfusion failed to save his life. He died at 11:45.

Jones Faces Quiz on Rubber Policy Today

Truman Group to Ask Him Why Reserve Wasn't Built Up

Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce, has been invited to appear before the Truman Defense Investigating Committee this morning and tell what he knows about the rubber shortage.

Jones, in addition to his duties as Secretary of Commerce and chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, is chairman of the RFC-owned Rubber Reserve Co. He is in charge of the Government's 500-million-dollar plant construction program designed to turn out 700,000 tons of synthetic rubber annually by the end of 1943.

Hugh Fulton, committee counsel, said the committee had three important questions to ask Mr. Jones:

1. Why the Rubber Reserve Co. failed to provide for an adequate reserve supply of rubber before Pearl Harbor, in compliance with the urgent recommendations of Leon Henderson and William L. Batt?

2. Why the Government is relying entirely on the German Buna-S process for its synthetic rubber supply. The committee has information showing that the butyl rubber process, developed by Standard Oil of New Jersey, is cheaper and can use ordinary petroleum by-products without the necessity of building expensive plants?

3. Why the Government was willing to pay the British and Dutch rubber monopoly 22 cents a pound for crude rubber when information in the committee's files shows the material could be marketed profitably at 5 cents a pound?

Other executives connected with the synthetic rubber program will be called to the stand later.

Fresh Demand Opposes Pupils Joining Union

Rep. Anderson Fights Restriction on Labor For Farms, Canneries

In a continuing controversy with Labor Secretary Perkins, Representative Anderson (Republican), of California, yesterday renewed demands for abolition of union membership as a prerequisite for employment of school children in harvesting and processing California's farm products—a condition viewed as restricting already inadequate supplies of farm labor.

At a time when other Administration officials were fearful that mobilization of man power for the armed forces and war industries might impede the "food-for-victory" program, Anderson made public Secretary Perkins' reply to his protest and declared that he was not satisfied with it.

Union Fee Reduced

The Californian revealed that in replying to his earlier demand that children be permitted to work without joining unions, the Secretary observed that the American Federation of Labor had reduced the union initiation fee to $2, including one month's dues.

Miss Perkins added that the dues were one dollar a month and that no worker would have to pay more than $3 for the harvest season.

The letter from the Secretary was accompanied by a memorandum from a member of the Labor Department staff in which it was reported that Walter F. Dexter, California State superintendent of schools, had denied he had made statements that children would have to join unions before working in food canning plants.

Telegram Made Public

An assertion that children would have to join the union was made in a telegram which Anderson also made public.

"I shall not be satisfied until every effort is made to enable students to assist in harvesting and processing our food crops without being obliged to join unions and pay unions initiation fees and dues."

After Consolidation

Office of War Information May Use Mellett Madhouse

The new information center building now nearing completion on Pennsylvania Avenue between Fourteenth and Fifteenth Streets Northwest is slated to become the home of a new super-information agency to be known as the Office of War Information, it was reported yesterday.

The building was originally designed to serve both as a headquarters for the Office of Government Reports headed by Lowell Mellett and as the home of a central information bureau. A huge oval information counter is being built in the center of the building to provide guidance for wandering businessmen.

It was reported that the President is expected to set up the new Office of War Information by executive order in a few days. The agency would combine the Office of Facts and Figures, the Office of the Coordinator of Information, the Office of Government Reports, and the information division of the War Production Board.

Under the proposed order, the press divisions of Army and Navy would be compelled to follow the policy laid down by the information chief, but the two service agencies would continue to issue war communiques from their own offices, it was stated.

Nelson Rockefeller's Office of Inter American Affairs and the Office of Censorship headed by Byron Price apparently would remain independent.

Air War Gains Fury

By the Associated Press

Kuibyshev, April 6.—Russian airmen and ground batteries, scoring one of the biggest bags of the war, destroyed 415 German planes in blazing aerial war during the eight-day period up to and including yesterday, a Soviet communique announced tonight.

This tremendous toll was rolled up, a Moscow communique said, at a cost of only 84 Soviet planes. On Saturday and Sunday alone, it added, 221 Nazi craft were destroyed.

Erupting in full fury over the weekend, the biggest day's total was reported yesterday, when 119 Nazi craft were listed as destroyed in the air and on the ground after Saturday's count had reached 102.

The communique said briefly that "no essential changes took place at the front."

A supplement to the Moscow communique said that in the last two days of fighting on the Leningrad front 2300 German officers and men were killed.

A Russian guards unit in the Kalinin sector recaptured seven more inhabited localities from the Germans, taking much equipment, it added.

Worse-than-usual weather of a sodden Russian spring was regarded as seriously dampening German hopes for an early spring drive to the east.

An unprecedented Easter snow on some parts of the battlefront emphasized the lateness of the season this year and underlined the prospect of weeks of slow thawing that will turn roads into rivers of mud and fields into quagmires.

Pincers Threaten Three Nazi Strongholds

London, April 6 (U.P.)—Kuibyshev dispatches said tonight that the latest Russian successes on the central front, where jaws of a Red army nutcracker movement were closing from north and south, had "deeply aggravated" German positions at Smolensk, Vyazma and Gzhatsk.

Gradual annihilation of the German spring reserves thrown prematurely into the battle of the Ukraine in an effort to stem the advance of Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's army may have thwarted permanently Adolf Hitler's hopes of breaking through to the Caucasian oil fields, other Soviet reports declared.

Timoshenko's forces were reported in a United Press dispatch from Kuibyshev to have "wiped out" the spring reserves of the Sixth and Seventeenth German Armies fighting in the Donets Basin, forcing the enemy command to call up fresh

Furious Jap Attack on Bataan Makes 'Some Gains;' U. S. Subs Sink 3 Ships in Nippon Waters

Two Heavily Laden Enemy Tankers Sent Down Near Bases In Caroline Islands

American submarines have sunk three more Japanese merchant vessels in western Pacific waters, the Navy announced last night.

Two of the enemy craft—"heavily-laden" tankers—were sent to the bottom in waters near the Caroline Islands, where the Japs have many strongly fortified bases.

Prowling through this dangerous area while on an extended patrol, a lone United States sub attacked the two enemy ships, was fired on by one of them, but escaped unhurt, the Navy communique said.

The other Jap vessel sunk was sent to the bottom in enemy home waters. No details of the actions were given.

This brings to 99 the number of Japanese vessels reported definitely as sunk by the American Army and Navy, and to 209, the total enemy craft listed as sunk, probably sunk or damaged.

Thirty Jap vessels have been destroyed by the United States Navy's submarines alone, not counting 10 reported as probably sunk and 11 damaged.

Fuel Probably for Bases

The list of enemy craft sunk by American Army and Navy action includes 29 warships and 70 freighters, tankers or other noncombatant vessels.

The two Japanese tankers sunk near the Japanese-mandate islands of the Caroline group presumably were carrying fuel oil or aviation gasoline to warships and air forces based at Truk Island or other major enemy bases. Their loss may handicap Japanese operations in this strategic area.

Nothing was said in the Navy communique as to whether the three latest successful attacks of American submarines were made with torpedoes or deck guns or both. The deadly "fish"—the Navy men's name for torpedoes—however, undoubtedly played the major role in sinking the craft.

Navy Communique No. 67

"Far East—1. A United States submarine has reported the sinking of an enemy freighter in Japanese waters while on extended patrol in that area.

"Southwest Pacific area—2. A United States submarine has reported that it sank two heavily laden Japanese tankers in waters near the Caroline Islands while on extended patrol in that area. The submarine was fired upon by one of the tankers, but escaped without damage.

"3. These sinkings have not been reported in any previous Navy Department communique.

"4. There is nothing to report from other areas."

Held Important Command

Admiral J. W. Wilcox, Jr., Lost Overboard in Heavy Weather

The Navy announced last night that Rear Admiral John W. Wilcox, jr., who held an important command afloat, has been lost overboard at sea in heavy weather.

No further details were given beyond a statement that the accident occurred during "normal cruising," indicating that no action with the enemy was taking place at the time.

Admiral Wilcox had been president of the Navy Board of Inspection and Survey here until his assignment to an undisclosed sea command last November.

His widow, the former Caroline Manigault, of Charleston, S. C., and their 21-year-old son, Arthur, and 11-year-old daughter, Mary, live at 215 Kennedy Drive, Chevy Chase, Md.

The Navy's announcement stated: "Rear Admiral J. W. Wilcox, jr., was lost overboard at sea in heavy weather during normal cruising, the Navy Department announced today.

"No further details are at present available."

Wilcox, a native of Milledgeville, Ga., where he was born March 22, 1882, had a long record of naval service.

A former Naval Academy football star, Wilcox also won recognition at Annapolis when he captured the lightweight wrestling crown in 1904.

During the World War he fitted out for patrol duty and commanded the yacht Amelia, which was renamed the U. S. S. Yacona, from October, 1917, to January, 1918,

Wave After Wave, Enemy Assaults Yank Lines, Paced By Tanks, Bombers

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Hitting savagely at American-Filipino lines in Bataan, Japanese assault troops have gained ground, the War Department disclosed last night.

Wave after wave of enemy infantrymen—supported by dive bombers, tanks and artillery—has been smashing with full fury at Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright's front lines some 20 miles north of Corregidor on the rocky Luzon Peninsula.

The unrelenting attack, which is still going on, resulted in "some gains" yesterday, the night Army communique reported, but was paid for in heavy Jap casualties.

Yanks Shelled From Barges

And as the Americans and Filipinos stubbornly fought back against the massed assaults on land, their right flank was attacked by artillery fire from guns mounted on barges in Manila Bay.

The shelling was directed at Gen. Wainwright's beach defenses along the eastern shores of Bataan Peninsula, but most of it fell short, the communique said.

This was evidently an attempt to "soften up" the shore defenses preparatory to still another attempt to land troops at night behind the American-Filipino lines.

The morning Army communique reported such a landing attempt on Sunday night. It was broken up by light artillery fire from Wainwright's beach defense forces.

Two Dive Bombers Felled

Two enemy dive bombers were shot down by antiaircraft fire during the attacks on Bataan, one Sunday and one yesterday, the War Department reported.

Corregidor has been free of bombing attacks since Saturday, after taking a heavy 12-day assault which did little damage.

Two of its satellite island citadels, Forts Frank and Drum, however, were attacked by Jap dive bombers yesterday morning. The light bombs dropped caused no damage and no casualties.

The morning Army communique told of the renewal on Sunday of the heavy Japanese mass attacks on the right center of Wainwright's line on Bataan. "Slight enemy gains" were made Saturday by such fierce frontal assaults.

Despite the fact that the Japs were able to bring a plane-tank team into action on the level terrain around Abucay, the American-Filipino troops stopped the enemy infantry and armored forces dead

Tojo Hints Invasion

India Will Fight On if Freed, Hindu Chief Assures Roosevelt

Two Ports in Madras Bombed; Jap Squadron Preying on Shipping

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, India, April 6.—Bombs fell among the people of India proper today when Japanese planes, attacking the Indian coast for the first time, raided two ports in Madras Presidency, and worse to befall was hinted in the disclosure that a Japanese naval force was ranging the Bay of Bengal.

The naval force, which includes at least one aircraft carrier, already has attacked commerce both with its surface ships and its planes, said a communique.

These first direct manifestations of war came to India as its people still were torn with hesitation on their political future and a few hours after Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo in a broadcast from Tokyo had warned of "great calamities" to India's 390,000,000 people. These would be unavoidable, he said, "in the course of our subjugation of British forces," a reference which seemed plainly to indicate his determination to direct a Japanese invasion.

The raiding force which attacked Vizagapatam, a city of more than 40,000 and site of a British naval station, and Cocanada, nearby provincial capital of 40,000, was officially described as small.

Vizagapatam and Colombo, capital of Ceylon and sixth largest port in the British Empire, which the Japanese attacked on Sunday, are two of the points from which the Japanese might expect war supplies to move to Burma and China.

Slight damage to the Vizagapatam Harbor area, which was attacked

Nehru Sends Message Through Johnson, President's Envoy

By the United Press

New Delhi, April 6.—Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, who more than any other man has the power to dictate India's war role, assured President Roosevelt today that India's millions would battle Japan to the last if permitted to direct their own war efforts.

He gave the assurance through Louis Johnson, the President's personal envoy to India, who arrived here last week in the midst of Sir Stafford Cripps' negotiations with Nehru and other Indian political leaders on Britain's offer of post-war dominion status in return for all-out Indian cooperation in the war.

Nehru talked with Johnson, at the latter's invitation, for two and a half hours.

With Japanese operations in the Bay of Bengal making settlement of Anglo-Indian political differences vitally urgent, Cripps' negotiations with the All-India Congress party remained suspended pending the British war cabinet's "final reply" to the demand for an Indian defense minister.

The reply had been expected late tonight or early tomorrow, but there

Busiest Woman's Reign Over?

First Lady to Ease 9-Year Pace By Taking Most of Summer Off

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Is Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt about ready to give somebody else a chance to be America's busiest woman?

Maybe not—but for the first time they could remember, attendants at her press conference yesterday found the First Lady's schedule of activities contracting, rather than expanding.

After setting a pace that has been continuously accelerated over a period of nine years, Mrs. Roosevelt calmly told her conference she would spend most of the summer at Hyde Park, has no war-work plans for herself, and does not know when she will take on another radio program.

Furthermore, she did not buy new clothes for Easter this year, she said, because she just didn't get around to it. Always before, it has seemed, Mrs. Roosevelt has had time for everything.

By ordinary standards, of course, she still is a tremendously busy person. She will move into a new apartment in Washington Square, New York, next Tuesday, and other women think moving is work. Also, she still has her daily and monthly columns to write, and she is considering a Victory Garden for the White House lawn.

Whether the garden really will get planted, she said yesterday, depends on the space available after some construction work at the Executive Mansion is completed. Unless the soil is fertile and the sod already upset, she indicated, vegetables will not be planted.

Returning to Washington by train yesterday morning, Mrs. Roosevelt had a first-hand brush with the city's noticeable decrease in taxicabs. She was about to make a canvass to see who wanted to ride in the White House car, she said, when she spied two friends—one of whom she delivered to the Mayflower and the other to the Washington Hotel.

Asked whether she liked the idea of building temporary dormitories on the Mall for Government girls, she declared she hoped they would be "really temporary." The girls do not care whether they have cubicles for rooms—such as the President suggested recently—Mrs. Roosevelt thinks. What they are interested in is anything inexpensive, clean and close to their work. She said she thought the idea of cubicles open at the top came to the President from his grammar school days.

S.E. Raid Warden Keeps Post

Cornelius Cleared on Charge Of Un-American Activities

W. G. Cornelius, deputy air-raid warden of the Southeast Civilian Defense Area, last night was acquitted of un-American activities by the District Defense Council's judge advocate general and members of the council's advisory board.

The board also held that Cornelius' usefulness in his post had not been impaired, following which Defense Coordinator John Russell Young announced his approval of both actions and said he would consider the incident closed.

The charges were brought against Cornelius by several subordinate wardens in the Southeast area who said a Dies Committee report had listed the deputy warden as a member of a Communist front organization.

The charges were weighed by Judge Advocate General Sam E. Whitaker and Advisory Board Members John W. Guider, Frederick H. Gibbs, Paul E. Lesh and Hugh Obear, who announced their decision after hearing more than 30 witnesses.

In announcing the verdict, the board said it believed "the great majority of loyal American citizens of this (Southeast) area will submerge their personal differences and give Cornelius cooperation."

Fall Into Crevice Kills Md. Youth On Mountain Hike

Edward R. Dowd, 19-year-old son of Thomas P. Dowd, superintendent of Postal Telegraph here, was fatally injured yesterday when he fell 35 feet into a rocky crevice while on a hike with a group of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School students on Sugar Loaf Mountain near Dickerson, Md.

The youth died at Frederick City Hospital four hours after being rescued by a squad of three men from the Hyattstown Fire Department, assisted by other hikers. The steep sides of the ravine necessitated formation of a human chain to rescue the youth.

Dowd was employed in the telephone sales department of the Western Electric Co. He was graduated last June from the Carlisle Military School at Bamberg, S. C., and attended the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School three years prior to enrolling at Carlisle. His home was at 411 Cumberland Avenue, Somerset, Md.

Three Freighters Escape Subs in Caribbean; One Tries to Ram Attacker

Panama Crew Returns, Saves Blasted Vessel

By the United Press

New Orleans, April 6.—An American ship which tried to ram and sink an enemy submarine off the Atlantic Coast and a Panamanian ship which was torpedoed and shelled for two and a half hours in the Caribbean, have reached safety, the Eighth Naval District announced.

The Navy also said a third ship, another American cargo vessel, had sighted an undersea craft at 12:10 a. m. March 20 somewhere in the Caribbean. While running without lights, the freighter spotted the sub a quarter-mile off its port bow. Apparently the enemy raider failed to sight the American ship and no shots were fired.

[The Associated Press said one or two torpedoes were fired at this ship, but missed.—Editor's note.]

The first American vessel, skippered by Oscar Christensen—a naturalized Dane—in the dark early hours of March 23 first was warned of the raider when detectors picked up signals from its motors; then lookouts sighted it off the port bow as it was surfacing.

"Hard a'port!" shouted Christensen, and the ship turned sharply toward the big, gray, medium-sized submarine. Men on the raider, who had been pouring out of the conning tower, now scrambled back down, yelling. Gathering speed, the "American cargo ship" lurched toward the sub, missed it by 30 feet and shot past.

The submarine then started after the ship, maneuvering for a good shot. But Skipper Christensen had it running wide open and started a zigzag course. An hour later the undersea menace was lost and the exciting incident was over by 3 a. m. The ship carried a crew of 38.

The Panamanian cargo vessel had been abandoned by 42 survivors, eight of the crew of 50 having been killed in the shelling early in the morning of March 8. Thinking the vessel doomed, the men jumped into the one undamaged lifeboat and three rafts to pull away.

Then, for almost three hours, the enemy craft pumped incendiary, explosive, pompom and .50-caliber machine gun shells into the hull until a star flare fired from another craft scared the raider away.

The ship later was reported still afloat, the raging fire from the incendiaries having burned out. Then some of its crew went out from the port at which they had been landed and brought her into Mobile, Ala.

The master of the ship, Capt. James Stewart, was killed by shell fragments as he stood on deck. First Mate Hawkins Fudske was killed by splinters from a shell which hit the ship just as he and others pulled away in the only undamaged lifeboat.

Survivors told the Navy that one man, already wounded in the shelling, jumped into the water only to be killed by a shark.

Italian Sub Near United States

Miami, Fla., April 6 (AP).—The captain of a medium-sized British freighter, sunk in West Indian waters March 13, is convinced that an Italian submarine was taking its toll of shipping in the Western Atlantic.

One member of the crew who died of a heart attack was the only casualty when the submarine torpedoed and shelled his vessel, Capt. J. J. Egerton said. The remaining 57 in the ship's company were picked up after 42 hours in lifeboats and were taken to Nassau, where the sinking was announced March 17.

"I am certain the sub was of the large Italian class," said Egerton, a graying, 64-year-old veteran of more than 40 years at sea, after he and the other survivors were brought to Miami.

"After we abandoned ship, the sub circled our four lifeboats and the captain shouted out to ask us whether we were all right and whether we needed anything. He spoke very good English, but it was easy to tell that it was an Italian talking English and not a German.

"Then he hoisted the Italian flag just before waving goodby."

The attack occurred in broad daylight, Egerton related, but the men saw nothing of the submarine or the torpedo until it crashed into the boiler room "and stopped the ship completely."

The men abandoned ship immediately. The sub surfaced, fired 10 or 12 shells, then used another torpedo to sink the blasted hulk.

Wermuth S-s-h-h's Jap, Hands Him Grenade to Hold, Then—

By Clark Lee
Associated Press Staff Writer

Melbourne, April 6.—Despite all that has been written about the courageous defenders of Bataan Peninsula, there still are many tales of individual heroism that never have been told.

There is, for instance, the story of a black night when Capt. Arthur Wermuth—the American officer whose almost legendary exploits caused him to be known as "The One-Man Army"—was pussyfooting along behind the Japanese lines on a typical scouting mission.

He suddenly bumped into about 20 shadowy figures, the first of whom raised a finger to his lips and murmured a warning "s-s-s-s-h-h!"

Wermuth, realizing he had run into a Japanese patrol, made a similar gesture and replied "s-s-s-s-h-h-h!"

Like a Greek Bearing a Gift

Then he drew a firing pin from a grenade, pressed the missle into the hand of the Japanese, closed the man's fingers and tiptoed away into the darkness with another admonishing "s-s-s-shshsh!"

The Japanese opened his fingers a moment or two later, releasing the firing mechanism, and——.

Then there is the story of the Filipino scout who fell in behind a Japanese scouting party of 11 men marching along a trail in single file one night near Davao. The Filipino drew out his bolo, lopped off the head of the nearest man and then cut the whole column down one by one from behind.

It was at Davao that an American sergeant named May of the Thirty-first (apparently the Thirty-first U. S. Infantry) made a lone stand against a Japanese warship attempting to cover a landing party. Equipped with a 50-caliber machine gun mounted on a truck, May mowed down boatload after boatload of Japanese as they come ashore.

Estimated He Got 250

The warship finally shot the truck out from under him, but he came back with another and went to work again. It was estimated he accounted for at least 250 Japanese. He is understood to be still fighting somewhere in the Philippines.

I have been trying to recall when I had my biggest scare during the campaign in Luzon. Frankly, I was scared every time there was a loud explosion nearby—and that was often.

I probably was lucky to get out with nothing more serious than a broken hand, suffered while diving into a foxhole to escape strafing planes, and a few small scars—the result of being blown off a dock at Corregidor by a shell.

A stick of six bombs which exploded about 50 yards away while I was visiting some Marine buddies in their trench at Corregidor also left me with one deaf ear—but it was partly bad before that.

C.I.O. Here Asks A. F. of L. to Join Victory Committee

The District C. I. O. made overtures yesterday to the local A. F. of L. to form a joint "Labor's Victory Committee" as a means of speeding up the war production effort.

Henry Rhine, president of the C. I. O. Industrial Union Council, invited the A. F. of L. Central Labor Union, to select three representatives to meet with three C. I. O. unionists on District war labor problems. The A. F. of L. body referred the matter to its executive board for action.

At the Central Labor Union meeting, Ernest Fontana, president of Painters Local 368, was elected treasurer over Henry L. Myers, business agent of the Beer and Soda Drivers Union Local 67, by a vote of 57 to 52.

U. S. to Take Half Of Pork Output

The Agriculture Department has notified the major meat packing plants of the country that it intends to take up to 40 per cent of their pork production during the next half of this year.

Packers were notified in telegrams which went out to 70 of the largest packing houses Saturday.

The telegram, it is understood, told packers that recent offerings of meat to the Agricultural Marketing Administration, purchasing agency for lend-lease shipments, had not been sufficient to meet its needs.

Quezon Helps Map Relief Of Philippines

By the Associated Press

Melbourne, Australia, April 6.—Manual Quezon, the small dynamic leader of the Philippine people, is working hard with military authorities somewhere in Australia on preparations for eventual reconquest of the island Commonwealth.

Looking 20 years younger than when he left the Philippines, although he is suffering from a bad cold, he is obviously healthier than when he was under constant bombing and shelling.

The president's wife, two daughters and son who made the arduous journey to Australia are also in good health.

Quezon is still chuckling over the Tokyo radio's claim that "Gen. MacArthur had him murdered."

The Tokyo reports were apparently fabricated when a Japanese warship captured a small Filipino boat somewhere in inner Philippine waters with part of Quezon's luggage on board.

Disgruntled at the President for slipping through their hands, the Japanese invented the story. Tokyo later resurrected Quezon only to report his death anew from a coughing spell somewhere on the island on Mindanao.

Information reaching the Quezon party from the occupied portions of the Philippines reports that the Japanese are proving their own worst enemy by brutal treatment of the people.

The Japanese high command is said to have attempted to control the behavior of the soldiers, but this apparently has been unsuccessful and there have been numerous reports of high-handed and cruel actions by Japanese troops.

The Japanese are said to have built a wall around Santo Tomas University, where 1500 American men, women and children are interned. The Americans' Filipino servants are denied direct contact with them, but may throw packages over the wall from time to time.

Mining Engineers Seized

On the Island of Masbate, the Japanese were reported to have captured a number of American mining engineers who tried to dynamite their property to prevent it from falling into the invader's hands. They were removed from the island by boat and have been unreported since.

General MacArthur's possessions at the Manila Hotel, however, have been respected. The Filipino manager refused to give up the key to MacArthur's suite when Gen. Masaharu Homma asked for it. The Japanese commander, who was later reported to have killed himself as a result of MacArthur's continued resistance on Bataan, did not insist.

A Japanese prince who arrived in Manila some time afterward asked, as a special favor, that the suite be opened. On the following morning, the prince returned the key personally and assured the manager that MacArthur would find everything as he left it.

Preacher Named Utah Peaks, Says Park Unit

By International News Service

Long current was the erroneous belief that some of the impressive religious names in Zion National Park, Utah, were bestowed by the early Mormons.

On the contrary, reports the National Park Service, such titles as White Throne," and "Angel's Land-"The Altar of Sacrifice," "The Great ing," were given by a fiery and eloquent preacher, Frederick Vining Fisher. He visited the canyon in 1911 and named many of the outstanding peaks.

Chinese Block Jap Drive On Mandalay

By International News Service

Chungking (Tuesday), April 7.—The Japanese drive on bomb-damaged Mandalay was reported early today to have been blocked, at least temporarily, by the timely arrival of powerful reinforcements for Chinese troops north of Toungoo in central Burma.

Fresh units of China's fifth and sixth armies, commanded by American Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, have taken over from battle-weary troops the front-line positions some 10 to 15 miles above Toungoo, it was reliably stated.

That front was declared to have been "stabilized" for the first time since the Chinese withdrew last week from Toungoo after a two-week battle in which they inflicted more than 5000 casualties on the enemy.

A Chinese communique announced that Stilwell's advance patrols, operating on both sides of the Mandalay railway above Toungoo, had clashed with Japanese parties south of Kyidaunggan, causing "some casualties" to the foe.

A British communique from Burma disclosed that a Japanese spearhead in western Burma had moved along the east bank of the Irrawaddy River to the Nyaungbinzeik area, 15 miles north of captured Prome. Otherwise, no changes were reported on the west Burma front, where British imperial troops are defending the approaches to the Minbu oil fields. Japanese activity Sunday was confined to air bombing and reconnaissance, a New Delhi announcement said.

Mandalay in Ruins, With 8000 Casualties

New Delhi, April 6 (U.P.).—Japanese bombers have left Mandalay a city of crumbled palaces and wrecked bazaars, with nearly 8000 casualties, front reports said tonight.

There was no communication with Mandalay, fabled city of Kipling's poetry and provisional Burma capital, but refugees arriving in Chungking said that 35 bombers all but wiped it off the map in a three-hour visitation last Friday which leveled two-thirds of its colorful commercial district.

The raid appeared to have been far worse than any of those directed against Rangoon earlier in the Burma campaign. Between 2000 and 3000 civilians were reported killed when the bombers roared in for a low-level bombing and machine-gun attack. An additional 5000 were listed as wounded.

In the confusion of pell-mell evacuation along the Burma Road to Lashio and Chungking, it was feared that many of the wounded would die for lack of treatment, or from disease that would follow almost inevitably the disruption of essential civilian services.

Mandalay had virtually no chance to escape the destructive raid because of the overwhelming air superiority the Japanese have built up on the Burma front, which enabled them to bomb the city at will. There were no reports of any Allied fighter opposition against the raiders.

The Japanese were said to have used British explosives captured at Rangoon or Singapore.

were signs that it might be delayed. Political circles, speculated on the possibility that Washington and London were in contact on the problem.

Nehru denied a report that Johnson had given him a letter from President Roosevelt. He said they had had "a general discussion on many matters." There was a suggestion in political quarters, however, that Johnson might have communicated to Nehru an oral message from the President.

Nehru also was understood to have assured Johnson that the Indian government, if it functioned in association with the Congress Party, could rely on unstinted support from the masses in waging a war for liberation and democracy.

War Cabinet Frames Answer

London (Tuesday) April 7. (INS).—Prime Minister Churchill met with his war cabinet until late Monday night, framing new instructions for Sir Stafford Cripps in New Delhi which informed political quarters said early today are designed to satisfy Indian demands.

Yanks, Aussies Make Great Raid on Japs in New Britain

By the Associated Press

United States Army Headquarters in Australia, April 6.—Raids described as "among the heaviest yet made by the Allies" were reported carried out today by flying Aussies and Americans striking at Rabaul and Gasmata in New Britain, where Japan was said to be reinforcing her badly wrecked and overmatched air forces.

The Sydney Herald, which reported the raids, said direct hits were scored on large Japanese ships in Rabaul Harbor, on the northeast New Britain coast, where the Japanese secured their first foothold on Australia's outer island rim.

[Unofficial dispatches from Port Moresby said many "near misses" were observed bursting alongside other vessels and strewing devastation through the harbor, the United Press reported.]

Both at Rabaul and at Gasmata, aircraft were said to have been damaged on the airdromes.

Earlier, it had been reported that Japan was strengthenenig her air forces in that area to bolster her faltering Australian offensive, and it was assumed that the Allies determined to destroy the new planes before they could get in action.

Forde Warns of Overconfidence

Meanwhile, Army Minister Francis M. Forde today warned the defenders not to grow overconfident because of their recent sharp successes.

This warning was emphasized by reports received in Sydney that the Japanese had taken up positions in four places in Bougainville and nearby islands at the northern end of the Solomon Islands.

Their places were given as Kieta, Kessa, Buka and Faisi. The new landings were said to have been accomplished by small forces from destroyers.

The Japanese could use the positions to patrol the seaway approaches to Australia from the United States, and possibly to project attacks upon the Free French islands of New Caledonia, the New Hebrides or the Fiji Islands in an encircling movement east of the Australian continent.

Forde ordered emergency regulations extended to Thursday Island and all the islands in Torres Strait within 100 miles of the mainland. Military authorities thus were enabled to act promptly in event the Japanese strike from the northeast.

Port Moresby Raided Again

Hostile action was limited to a Japanese raid, the twenty-third, on Port Moresby, northern defense center in southern New Guinea. Of seven Japanese bombers with fighter escort which attacked just after noon, the defenders reported they shot down one Zero fighter, and damaged a second one and a bomber. One casualty, a wounded sergeant, and slight damage to a gasline dump were reported.

Dr. Hubertus J. Van Mook, Dutch East Indies Lieutenant Governor told Gen. Douglas MacArthur that two groups of Dutch troops "of considerabel size" were continuing to hold out in Java's jungles and mountains, and inquired as to the role which they are expected to play in the general strategic plan.

He said the forces under Gens. W. Schilling and A. Plesman were well supplied with munitions and food.

twice, was reported and only a few casualties occurred at Cocanada—possibly because the raiding force had been dealt with so severely when it attempted the surprise blow at Colombo only to be ambushed by a waiting R. A. F. which asserted 27 of the 75 raiding planes were shot down and 30 more damaged.

Vizagapatam and Cocanada, almost half way up the eastern Indian coast between Madras and Calcutta, are about 800 miles from the Andaman Islands where Japan seized her first foothold in the Bay of Bengal.

A hint came from London naval quarters that the Japanese naval force included two aircraft carriers and that British warships already might be searching for the Japanese task force.

London observers pointed out that Rome broadcasts 10 days ago reported a strong British squadron, including two battleships, two carriers and several cruisers and smaller warships had rounded the Cape of Good Hope en route to the Indian Ocean.

British sources said Japanese warships and planes had attacked merchant ships several times in recent days, and it was assumed that one of the missions of the Japanese flotilla was to cut United Nations supplies to Burma and the Chinese. This also was borne out by the fact that Japanese attacked Colombo, the Ceylon capital, instead of Trincomalee, the Ceylon naval base.

(A Japanese broadcast said naval units—apparently naval air units was meant—had been battering at Colombo since Saturday, inflicting heavy damage in attacks aimed at "enemy warships, merchantmen, air facilities and the principal military establishments.")

300 British Planes Blast Nazi Industry

1000 Tons of Bombs Dumped From Coast To Rhineland Area

By the Associated Press

London, April 6.—One of the mightiest British air fleets ever to cross the English Channel—a force of more than 300 bombers—cast 1000 tons of explosive and countless fire bombs upon German war plants in an overnight raid extending from the French coast inland to Parisian industrial suburbs and on east to the heart of the Rhineland.

In this great attack, a part of a master plan to choke the flow of German arms eastward to the Russian front, only five British craft were lost, the air ministry announced, less than 2 per cent of those engaged.

Hard hit were the docks at Le Havre and the Gnome-Rhone works at Gennevilliers, near Paris, in which French workmen under the lash of the Nazi conqueror are marking airplane engine parts for use against England and the Russian Allies, but the greatest power of the raid was expended on Cologne, the metropolis of the industrial Rhineland and the hub of its railway transport.

More than 150 British planes beat at Cologne, in the 105th assault upon that city.

Returning pilots told of great flames left in Cologne and of British super-bombs falling upon the targets in fountains of fire.

The Germans themselves, in official broadcasts, acknowledged during the day that there had been material damage in western Germany, although claiming it was to residential sections, but asserted that only slight damage was caused in the Paris industrial area.

(A Vichy broadcast said that there were several casualties in the Paris area and that bombs fell on Argenteuil, Marly and Colombes, as well as Gennevilliers.)

War Sidelights

Reds Build Sledges for Spring Drive

Kuibyshev, Russia, April 6 (AP).—A Russian sledge turned out by hand by two men in two hours will play an important part in the war in Russia during the spring thaw.

This contraption consists of two stout wooden cut runners atop which is a wooden framework, and is pulled by a single horse. Built right on the ground, it is amazing what loads it carries and what a horse can pull, due to the lack of friction.

The sledge is called a "rozvalni," and its construction has been unchanged for centures. Drivers ride—even sleep—on them, hence the name, which comes from the verb "razvalista," meaning relaxing. During the coming operations, the rozvalni is going to be as important as the highest perfected weapon, tank or plane.

One Way to Save Planes

London, April 6 (AP).—American fliers in the R. A. F. Eagle Squadrons have introduyced a new decoration—"the Order of Prang"—but it never appears in official citations.

"Prang" is Eagle slang for crash. Any American pilot who damages his plane gets the decoration whether he wants it or not, if an investigation shows the damage might have been avoided.

The "order," a large wooden cross in the shape of a German Iron Cross, is presented at full-dress parade, together with a scroll detailing the damage.

For seven days the award must be worn.

"It's made the Americans put their planes down as if they were made of glass," one R. A. F. pilot commented.

Parisians Arrested

Vichy, April 6 (U.P.).—German authorities have arrested an undetermined number of intellectuals in Paris, it was learned tonight. They were said to include professors and scientists. No reason for their arrest was given.

When Yankees Hurry

Sydney, April 6 (AP).—American hustle is on the job in Australia, a correspondent for the Sydney Sun with the United States forces reported today, describing the transformation of a sheep pasture into a troop camp in 12 hours.

He said carpenters, plumbers, bricklayers, surveyors, draftsmen, electricians and road builders descended on the quiet sheep paddock "like a swarm of grasshoppers."

"Within an hour," he reported, "the site was pegged into streets and blocks. Within four hours framework buildings were up, tents were rigged and roads laid.

"Within six hours a permanent water system had been installed with hot and cold water and bathrooms. Within eight hours each tent and building had been supplied with electric light, a drainage and sanitary system had been completed, and the camp was interlinked by telephone and radio.

"Within 12 hours an army had moved in; hot meals awaited them, and the carpenters, plumbers and all had moved off to the next job."

Big Army Bomber Crashes in Desert Near Tucson; 5 Die

Tucson, Ariz., April 6 (AP).—Motors of a big U. S. Army bomber failed today, one of them burst into flames, and the ship crashed on the desert 22 miles southeast of here, killing five officers and men.

The dead and their addresses were:

was hit twice, once in the right leg, and once in the temple by a police bullet which probably ricochetted off a nearby brick wall. At Emergency Hospital, his condition was described as satisfactory.

His companion, Police Private Norman Gray, was uninjured.

Wesley E. Donaldson, 43, of 480 G Street Southwest, was wounded in the left shoulder by a glancing police bullet as he started to enter an automobile. With his back turned to the gun-play, he believed the noise to be an automobile backfire until he felt his wound. He was treated at Providence Hospital and sent home.

Policemen Clark and Gray, both of the Fourth Precinct, ordered Davis to drop his weapon after they were told that Davis was arguing with others on the street and threatening them. When Davis fired at Officer Clark, both policemen drew their service revolvers and emptied them at Davis. Each fired six shots.

All three pistols were turned over to Capt. John Fowler, police department ballistics expert, to determine conclusively which bullets went where.

Davis, a laborer, had a police record of several arrests on minor charges.

At the time of the shooting, Senator Pat McCarran, chairman of the Senate District Committee, was inspecting police headquarters with Maj. Edward J. Kelly, police superintendent, and District Commissioner John Russell Young. Kelly took McCarran and Young to the Fourth Precinct, where they observed police work on the case at first hand.

U. S. to Recruit Women's Land Army for Farm Work

A woman's land army to work at prevailing wages in areas where there is a shortage of farm labor will be recruited through the United States Employment Service, which is now making a quick survey of this summer's needs, it was learned yesterday.

Routing of labor, transportation and housing, as well as adequate chaperonage will be provided or arranged by the employment service.

This means that groups such as the American Women's Voluntary Services, which initiated a land army program several months ago, will not be able to send nonpaid volunteers into the field nor be able to put a Nation-wide program into effect. Mrs. Ernest Dupuy, who organized the first A. W. V. S. unit, gave up her job last week and at that time declared she thought some Government agency should assume responsibility for the task.

Under the employment service plan, local labor will be utilized to capacity before outsiders are brought in, and available men will be utilized before women are called in.

While looking to the wide use of women as farm workers before the war is over, the program does not necessarily call for the use of many this summer.

Many of the workers will be recruited individually and housed by the families for which they work.

If the "unit" plan of recruitment has to be put into effect, with whole groups volunteering at urban points, the service will make definite arrangements for sanitary housing facilities.

In some instances subsistence may be advanced to workers pending settlement for their wages. A physical examination for them is being considered and in some instances training may be given.

Navy Gets Gold-Plated Daniels Binoculars

Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy from 1913-1921, and recent United States Ambassador to Mexico, has donated his gold-plated binoculars to the Navy, it was announced yesterday.

Daniels' glasses have been assigned No. 192-1942 and soon will be sent to a ship of the United States fleet. As in the case of other citizens who have furnished the Navy with binoculars, he will receive $1 as a rental and depreciation fee.

Since the February 10 appeal to the public for binoculars, 1235 pairs have been received at the Naval Observatory here, and 677 of these are now in use.

Kearny Repair Crew Praised For Fast Work

The U. S. S. Kearny, American destroyer torpedoed in the North Atlantic last October 17, with the loss of 11 lives, has been repaired at the Boston Navy Yard and is again operating with the fleet, the Navy announced yesterday.

Emergency repairs to the 1630-ton destroyer were made by the repair ship Vulcan in the North Atlantic following the submarine attack some two months before the United States entered the war.

The Kearny was torpedoed as she dropped depth bombs when she sighted a merchant ship under attack by a submarine. Three torpedoes missed her, but the fourth struck her on the starboard side near the forward fireroom.

Force of the blast breached the side of the ship well under the water line, flooding the boiler compartment and killing the men stationed in the boiler room.

The emergency repairs of the Vulcan were so efficient that Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox addressed a letter of appreciation to Lieut. Comdr. Edwin R. Duncan, repair officer of the Vulcan, and Admiral Ernest J. King commended Capt. Leon S. Fiske, commanding officer of the Vulcan.

Knox's letter stated in part: "It is realized that the task was performed under the most trying conditions of weather and that considerable ingenuity was displayed in the accomplishment. An excellent job—well done."

King's letter to Fiske quoted part of the report by the commandant of the Boston Navy Yard:

"Appreciating that the temporary repairs were rapidly accomplished in an open, notoriously rough harbor in icy water at a latitude and season where the available hours of daylight must have been very few, and when the dangers and difficulties of working within an improvised caisson under such conditions were great, the successful accomplishment of this feat of repairs merits the sincere admiration of all, and is an inspiration to those in the naval service ashore who are bulding and repairing units of the fleet."

Treasury Offering Very Well Received

Subscription books for the Treasury's current offering of $1,500,000,000 short-term certificates of indebtedness bearing .5 per cent interest were closed at the end of business yesterday and Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., said the offering had been "very well received."

Announcement of the amount of subscriptions and the basis of allotment probably will be made Friday. There is little doubt that the flotation has been oversubscribed several times.

U. S. and Ecuador Sign Lend-Lease Agreement

By the Associated Press

The United States completed formation of a South American lend-lease bloc yesterday as it signed a pact with Ecuador.

The action leaves only two South American nations—Argentina and Chile—without lend-lease agreements. Both countries still maintain relations with Germany, Italy and Japan.

Because of this country's announced policy of giving military and naval aid only to those countries that have exposed themselves to Axis attack by declaring themselves at the side of the United Nations, informed sources said lend-lease agreements would not be signed with Argentina and Chile until they sever relations with enemies of the United States.

Ecuador was the eighth of the ten South American countries to sign a lend-lease agreement. Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, Ecuadorian ambassador who signed the pact with Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles, said it involved "a substantial amount." He declined to disclose the figure.

The signing also was witnessed by officials of the State Department's treaties division and lend-lease officials.

The lend-lease pact with Ecuador probably does not involve more than $10,000,000, informed sources said. They pointed out that United States forces are stationed in Ecuador and that this made a larger agreement unnecessary.

Ecuadorian President Arroyo del Rio has announced a "North American force" is making military and naval improvements in his country.

Admiral Tells Of Boat Trip By MacArthur

By Lee Van Atta
International News Service Staff Writer

Melbourne, April 6.—The role played by the United States Navy in the dramatic journey of Gen. Douglas MacArthur and party to Australia was described to this correspondent today by Rear Admiral Frank Rockwell.

Rockwell, a lanky, dynamic, graying Marylander whose family is now in Washington, D. C., took over command at the Cavite naval yard on November 5. He went out of that base to Corregidor Island only after the Japanese had bombed him and his staff night and day on Cavite, halting all naval operations.

When MacArthur was instructed to proceed to Australia he consulted Rockwell. It was decided to attempt the hazardous journey with the fastest available motor torpedo boats.

The only shortcoming was lack of space to carry the necessary fuel.

With the aid of his chief of staff, Capt. H. J. Ray, of Coronado, Calif., Rear Admiral Rockwell began secret tests with his little torpedo boats to see if they could carry gasoline reserve loads on their decks.

Not even the ensigns commanding the boats of the mosquito fleet were aware of the plans for MacArthur's departure until the sailing day. Only Rockwell, Ray and Lieut. H. R. Bulkeley, who commanded the torpedo boat squadron from aboard the craft bearing MacArthur, were informed.

While the tests with gasoline deck loads were going on, the ensigns were told that they were to go off on a long range attack mission. Only on the day of departure were the ensigns and their crews told that their real mission was to take MacArthur and his party out to a distant rendezvous with a Flying Fortress, which was to complete the journey to Australia.

Rockwell expressed the highest praise for the ensigns and crews that made the perilous dash.

"An Anxious Moment"

"It was an epic in itself—the way these men forced their boats through the engine-rending journey without loss," he remarked.

After a week of plans and tests, Rockwell recounted, everything was ready. Four of the "mosquito" boats slipped out from Corregidor under cover of darkness.

"It was a pretty rough trip, all right," Rockwell recalled. "I gave ourselves a 50-50 chance. If we had lost one ship on the last day, we would all have been lost, and sighting that enemy destroyer gave us an anxious moment, I tell you."

[It had been disclosed that the little flotilla came close to a Japanese destroyer on the last day of its journey, but eluded attack.—Editor's note.]

"The trip was complicated by a lack of navigation charts and lights and of any knowledge as to where we were actually headed due to the complete blackness. We almost had to smell our way.

One Craft Left Behind

"We had planned that if there were any breakdowns in our boat we would shift immediately to another torpedo boat and sink the ship that had broken down. The first night out, one of the boats did have a mechanical breakdown, but her ensign and crew were able to repair it immediately. Then, our boat had a breakdown while we were unable to see the rest of the boats. We were forced to repair the boat ourselves.

"We did not sight the others until late the next day when three of our boats got together. One of the others had engine trouble and transferred all her passengers to our boat. The crew of the disabled boat remained aboard their ship.

"The crew of that craft was trying to make repairs as we went on.

"Our boat was the only one to reach the rendezvous on schedule. We had made a 13-hour run during the night.

"I had never been so soaked in my life. We were traveling through the roughest seas and we were wet to the skin from the first moment until our arrival.

"The balance of the journey by plane was a joyride compared to the trip by sea."

Rockwell is now attached to the staff of Vice Admiral Herbert F. Leary, commander of United Nations naval forces in the Australia-New Zealand area, and is in command of all torpedo boats in the South Pacific, carrying the fight against the Japanese.

Speaking of the Cavite naval base, Rockwell had only the highest praise for the courage and tenacity of the American bluejackets that were under fire there. After the burning of Cavite by Japanese bombers, Rockwell and his outfit moved to Sangley Point on Manila Bay where they remained until they were again bombed out.

Still Hold Lateral Road

Despite the loss of ground, it is believed here on the basis of the reports received, that Wainwright's lines are still north of the only east to west highway across Bataan, from Bagac to Balanga.

Gen. Yamashita's improvised "navy," with which he has been shelling the beach defenses of eastern Bataan, is believed to have been fitted out in Manila. Field guns, most likely 75-mm. weapons, were probably mounted on the barges and armor plate attached in the city's machine shops.

The unrelenting nature of the Japanese land assaults, which have been almost continual since Saturday, indicated to observers here that Yamashita has determined to attempt to crush the little American-Filipino army on Bataan at all costs. His forces outnumber Wainwright's by more than 10 to 1.

The texts of yesterday's Army communiques follow:

Communique No. 177

"1. Philippine Theater: The enemy on April 5 renewed the attack on the right center of our line in Bataan. Though the assault was made with great froce, supported by tanks, artillery and dive bombers, it was stopped by our troops after hard fighting. Japanese losses were heavy. One enemy dive bomber was shot down by our antiaircraft artillery.

"Another attempt to land hostile troops on the east coast of Bataan under cover of darkness last night was frustrated by light artillery fire from our beach defenses.

"Corregidor was again free from hostile air raids, but two enemy dive bombers attacked Fort Frank yesterday morning and Fort Drum yesterday afternoon with light bombs. No damage and no casualties resulted.

"2. India: A delayed message confirms previous press dispatches reporting a successful raid by American Army units on Japanese shipping at the Andaman Islands in the Bay of Bengal, on April 2. The attacking planes were heavy bombers of the Flying Fortress type. The attack was led by Maj. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton, United States Army. Direct hits were scored on a Japanese cruiser and a transport. Both ships were left in flames and heavy explosions were observed. Three American planes were slightly damaged by antiaircraft fire and by enemy fighter planes, but all returned to their base.

"3. There is nothing to report from other areas.

"1. Philippine Theater: Savage fighting is in progress in Bataan today where Gen. Wainwright's troops are resisting stubbornly the reported attacks of Japanese assault troops. During the day the enemy made some gains, but at a heavy cost in casualties. The attacks were supported by artillery and dive bombers. One enemy plane was shot down by our fire.

"On the east coast hostile artillery, firing from barges, harassed our beach defenses. Most of the shells were short of the targets.

"There was no air attack on Corregidor today.

"2. There is nothing to report from other areas."

Highest Court Holds Ship Strike Mutiny

True Even When Vessels Are in Port, 5-4 Decision Says

By William R. Spear
Associated Press Staff Writer

A sitdown strike aboard a ship is mutiny even though the vessel is in port, the Supreme Court ruled yesterday.

In a 5-to-4 decision, the court upset a Labor Board order directing the Southern Steamship Co. to reinstate five seamen who were discharged after a strike aboard the steamer City of Fort Worth at Houston, Tex., in 1938.

But it upheld the portions of the board's order directing the company to bargain with the C. I. O. National Maritime Union. It was the company's alleged refusal to do so, after the union had been certified as bargaining representative, which caused the strike.

The strikers refused to provide steam to operate machinery for loading cargo and the board and the union contended that their sitdown, which was attended by no violence, constituted no danger to the vessel and that the ship was safe while tied up at the dock.

Normandie Fire Recalled

But the majority opinion, written by Justice Byrnes, recalled the recent disaster to the former French luxury liner Normandie at New York, in the course of its conversion to naval use, as "grim enough proof that the hazard of fire is ever present."

"It is by no means clear that a ship moored to a dock is 'safe' if the crew refuses to tend it, as the strikers did at Houston," Byrnes wrote. "At the very least, steam must be maintained to provide light and fire protection."

Moreover, the opinion observed, "the strategy of discipline is not simple" and "the maintenance of authority hinges upon a delicate complex of human factors." Thus, it added, in enacting the mutiny laws, "Congress may very sensibly have concluded that a master whose orders are subject to the crew's veto in port cannot enforce them at sea."

"Ever since men have gone to sea," the decision said, "the relationship of master to seaman has been entirely different from that of employer to employe on land. The lives of passengers and crew as well as the safety of ship and cargo are entrusted to the master's care. Everyone and everything depend on him. He must command and the crew must obey. Authority cannot be divided."

Plain Congressional Mandate

The mutiny statute covers acts not only on the high seas but in "any other waters within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States" and the court viewed this language as a "plain Congressional mandate" that the act applied to vessels in port.

The majority held that the Labor Board, in performing its mandate to "effectuate the purposes" of the Wagner Act, could not "wholly ignore other and equally important Congressional objectives."

The dissenting opinion, by Justice Reed, held that the board did have discretion to order the seamen reinstated and noted that the board had found that they were discharged "not for disobeying orders but for striking, for peacefully, albeit unlawfully, resorting to self-help in retaliation against denial of their rights." Justices Black, Douglas and Murphy joined in the dissent.

The court also disposed of a Florida case in which the question whether the 1939 Hatch Act applied to primaries as well as general elections had been raised, but it did not decide this issue. Two WPA officials and the police chief of Ormond, Fla., were accused of threatening a WPA worker with loss of his job unless he supported certain candidates in the 1940 primary. The Supreme Court sent the case back to the District Court to consider whether such an action was not outlawed by the relief act itself.

40 Cents an Hour

Textile Work Basic Wages Set by U. S.

Minimum wages in the textile industry were fixed yesterday by the Labor Department at 40 cents an hour in an action the department said would mean direct wage increases for 150,000 workers beginning April 20.

The order, effective on that date, was signed by L. Metcalf Walling, wage and hour administrator, on recommendation of a committee that studied economic conditions in the industry. As defined in the order, the industry includes all textiles except knitted and woolen goods.

Total employment in the industry is approximately 750,000, but 600,000 already earn 40 cents or more per hour.

Kansas City, April 6 (AP).—One thousand Kansas City garment workers were granted pay increases ranging from 7½ to 10 per cent today by a three-member board of arbitration.

Meyer Perlstein, St. Louis, vice president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union (A. F. L.), said time workers were raised 10 per cent, piece workers 7½ per cent.

Time workers now receive a minimum of $44.10 a week. The average pay of piece workers has been 75 cents an hour.

Defense Bonds Now Become War Bonds

Defense bonds and stamps yesterday became officially "war savings bonds and stamps."

Persistent suggestions that the change be made have been received by the Treasury ever since Pearl Harbor, but it delayed making the change in order to use up the printed material bearing the old name.

Cooke Urges Commando Staff To Bolster Ailing Factories

By Joseph Short

Copyright by Chicago Sun

The daring exploits of Allied military "commandos" yesterday inspired Morris L. Cooke, former OPM official, to suggest a force of United States industrial commandos to take over war production jobs generally considered to be impossible of accomplishment.

Cooke projected his idea from the White House steps but said he had not taken up the "commandos" idea in a conference he had with the President. He smilingly hinted to reporters that he wished he had.

Cooke pictured his commandos as kindred spirits to the military commandos who have doen such things as raid the Norwegian Coast and have penetrated Axis lines in Africa to wipe out enemy generals and staff officers.

"They don't take no for an answer and they're full of optimism," he said.

Say, for instance, Cooke suggested, the war effort needs anything from cotter pins to tanks and the general opinion is that the job cannot be done in the allotted time with the available materials.

The commandos would then be sent in to overcome the obstacles and do the job.

The former OPM official made the commandos proposal after expressing the opinion that the United States would have to go much farther than it already has done in utilizing the machines of small factories. Presumably the commandos would be drawn from the managers of industrial plants not now engaged in war production.

Cooke, a consulting engineer whose work in OPM concerned small business, said he was informed by an Australian official that every machine tool on that continent was in use, even though some were 100 years old.

"Here," he added, "if a machine tool doesn't have the latest gadgets they won't take it."

Cooke's present assignment is on a joint commission attempting to settle with Mexico a dispute of oil lands, owned by American interests and expropriated by the Mexican government several years ago. He refrained from saying what he had discussed with the Chief Executive except that "oil was mentioned."

Bar on Lead Foil For Cigarettes Effective May 1

Tobacco firms were forbidden by the War Production Board yesterday to use lead foil on cigarette packages on and after May 1, regardles of whether they have supplies on hand after that date.

The manufacture of lead foil for cigarettes already has been prohibited. The additional action, said WPB, was necessary so that all manufacturers would cease the use of foil simultaneously, despite the fact that some producers have built up considerable supplies.

The amendment also placed on the prohibited list the use of lead in costume jewelry, novelties, buttons and trophies.

6 Mine Union Officers Quit Posts in C.I.O.

By the Associated Press

Denver, April 6.—Six officials of the United Mine Workers' Union resigned today as regional directors of the C. I. O. because of attacks they said national C. I. O. executive board members and other C. I. O. officials had made on President John L. Lewis of the U. M. W. and on the U. M. W. itself.

In a resolution adopted at a conference, they said attacks on Lewis for a suggestion that the C. I. O. and A. F. L. join forces for the duration of the war were "unfair and unwarranted."

The regional directors who submitted their resignations to Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., were:

Richard Francis, Seattle, who also resigned as subregional S. W. O. C. director; William Dalrymple, Portland, Oreg.; W. A. Boyle, Billings, Mont.; Frank Hefferly, Denver, who also resigned as Colorado S. W. O. C. directors; Henry Allai, Pittsburg, Kans., and David Fowler, Muskogee, Okla.

Among U. M. W. officials who signed the resolution as approving the resignations of the regional directors was Ray Edmundson, president of District 12, Illinois, who also recently quit as a C. I. O. official.

Wages Cut 15% By Price Rises, Murray Asserts

Copyright, 1942, by Chicago Sun

Demanding a far-reaching rationing system, C. I. O. President Philip Murray wrote Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday that wage cuts, in the form of price rises, were threatening the health, efficiency and morale of war production workers.

Murray declared that the cost of living for workers had risen 15 to 20 per cent within the last year, meaning "less food, housing and clothing for the men and women in war plants who are turning out the weapons of victory."

He charged that no effective action to control the cost of living had been taken under price control legislation and that responsibility rested with Henderson.

"Efforts have been made," said Murray, "to camouflage this failure (to act) behind the smokescreen of an attack upon labor, implying that the increases in the cost of living have been due to the wages of labor.

"This is false and you well know it to be . . . The price rises which have been taking place cannot be blamed on labor's wages."

Lewis Called 'Labor Fuehrer' by N. Y. Union Suing for Reinstatement in Mine Workers

By the Associated Press

New York, April 6.—Denouncing John L. Lewis as a "labor fuehrer" who has opposed all-out war efforts, a New York local of his C. I. O. United Mine Workers today filed suit in Supreme Court to reinstate its charter, revoked March 12 by the U. M. W. president.

Named as codefendants with Lewis were his daughter, Kathryn, secretary-treasurer of District 50, of the Mine Workers; Ora Gassaway, president of District 50, and "all and any representatives of Lewis in the State of New York."

Justice John E. McGeehan signed an order requiring Lewis and the other defendants to show cause April 9 why the charter should not be reinstated.

At the time of the revocation, Lewis said he acted because the local—No. 12165 of the Chemical, Drug and Cosmetic Workers—disobeyed orders to divide its membership into smaller, more efficient units.

Samuel Machlis, the local's vice president, said then that the act was "Hitler-like" and "the only crime of our organization was that it particularly supported the war policies of President Roosevelt and the national C. I. O.

In a brief filed by the local it was charged that the charter revocation was "the culmination of a long-standing controversy between John L. Lewis and many of the local units, which refused to serve Lewis' political feud with the President of the United States and with Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O."

In a statement Machlis added: "This local shall never succumb to the rule-or-ruin policy of a power-lust dictator who would be the labor fuehrer of the 'new order' in America if his policy of opposing all-out war efforts and disrupting the ranks of labor can succeed.

"We are determined that John L. Lewis shall not, by ruthless assumption of power, manifestly not his, destroy the democratic workings and traditions of an organization built by the sweat and blood of millions of American workers."

Machlis also declared that Lewis wanted "to wipe out all those who stand in the way of his 'Cliveden set' war and labor policy and those who dare question his authority."

The court action also aims to recover the local's property, which is allaged to have been seized by Lewis' New York representatives, and to enjoin the defendants from interfering with the local, which was said to have more than 2000 members covered by 32 contracts.

Thomas Praises Production Study

With the statement that it was the "most remarkable analysis of our war production to date," Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, today had inserted in the Congressional Record a comprehensive review of America's war status by Cecil B. Dickson, of the Chicago Sun's Washington bureau.

The review appeared in Sunday papers of the Chicago Sun and The Washington Post. Prepared in connection with the twenty-fifth anniversary of the entry of the United States into the first World War, the article contrasted the advanced state of America's present war effort with the unpreparedness of the 1917 period.

Wage Ceiling Tacked On Arms Fund Bill

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

Ceilings on wages as well as profits, rents and prices were proposed in the Senate yesterday, as a fight to write rigid profits limits into a 19 billion dollar defense bill headed toward a probable conference showdown.

The "Baruch plan" for across-the-board ceilings was offered in the Senate by Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida. He urged reopening of the whole question of price control to reach all inflationary factors.

The labor issue boiled to the surface in another amendment by Pepper to outlaw the payment of any fee to a labor union as a condition for work on war projects.

Require Two-Thirds Vote

With the profits row broadening to cover the entire field of controversial price and labor legislation, the Senate faced a series of votes today to determine whether any legislation shall be added to the big sixth supplemental defense appropriation bill.

As new legislation on an appropriation bill, Pepper's two amendments require a two-thirds vote of the Senate before they may be considered. With the leadership opposed, survival of either appeared doubtful.

The Appropriations Committee's sliding scale formula for restricting profits also goes to a Senate test today. Like the Pepper amendment, it requires a two-thirds vote suspending Senate rules, before it can be called up.

Opposed by Nelson

The Administration is vigorously opposing any percentage limitation on profits pending tax bill action. Regardless of Senate treatment of profits the battle is expected to go in the end to a House-Senate conference committee. The House already has approved a 6 per cent of cost flat limit on profits.

Donald Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, told the Appropriations Committee that "in my opinion limiting profits by law as proposed in this act (House bill) would slow up procurement, and, in my considered judgment, interfere in a substantial degree with the war program."

Published hearings revealed that Nelson indorsed a more flexible formula for direct control of profits by officials of the agencies concerned, the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission. Such an amendment was drawn by Senateors O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Overton, of Louisiana (Democrats), but it was narrowly defeated in committee.

"I thinik the majority of industry, if I interpret it rightfully, would be, if all things were equal, willing to work for nothing for the Government in this war period, provided there was no capital impairment during this time," Nelson testified before th Appropriations subcommittee.

Pending when the Senate meets today will be a motion to suspend the rules to adopt the committee's sliding scale amendment restricting profits over a graduated range from 10 per cent on the first $100,000 of war contracts down to 2 per cent on all above 50 million dollars.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said he would take the floor to urge Congress to leave the entire question of profits limitations for tax bill action. He will be supported by Senate Majority Leader Barkley. Sharing this view, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau told reporters that "one good tax bill is all we need to take care of excess profits."

Taft Offers Compromise

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, moved to modify the committee formula. He dropped into the hopper a compromise amendment creating a special profits board to determine profits to be allowed on each type of contract. The board would comprise the Secretaries of War, Navy and Treasury, and the chairmen of the War Production Board and the Maritime Commission. The board's aim would be a cost percentage figure between 2 and 10 per cent, which would return to the contractor "approximately 5 percentum on the capital which it has invested in the business."

Another amendment by Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, struck at discrimination in hiring workers on war contracts "because of race, color or creed." Such discrimination would be punishable by a $1000 fine or six months' imprisonment.

Important tests were thus opened by the House profits rider on a wide field of legistration at a time that the Senate was informally in "Easter recess." Twenty-six Senate Democrats were said to have left Washington with the understanding that no important decisions would be reached. The Connally plant seizure motion, projecting both the labor and profits issues indirectly, had been postponed until April 20, and Congress was embarked on a "cooling off" period when the profits row broke.

Pepper's move to clamp on Baruch plan inflation controls followed his recent call for suspension of the 40-hour week and his bid for a committee to explore the whole field of profits, price and labor controls. His amendment recalled unsuccessful efforts by Representative Gore (Democrat), of Tennessee, at the time of price bill action in the House, to impose the overall controls advocated by Bernard M. Baruch.

Meanwhile the House, which eight days ago projected the profits dispute, heard that Gen. Douglas MacArthur while chief of staff in 1931, favored a 6 per cent limitation on profits, based on a company's "investment." Representative Smith (Democrat) of Washington, cited testimony by MacArthur before a Congressional committee studying proposals to limit war profits 11 years ago. Smith said "these views of Gen. MacArthur are just as sound today as they were a decade ago and should receive from Congress the favorable consideration to which they are entitled."

when he was appointed aide on the staff and flag secretary of the commander, Battleship Force 2, of the Atlantic Fleet.

From July, 1934, to June, 1935, Wilcox commanded the U. S. S. Chester, a heavy cruiser. Following that, he became chief of staff of the commander of cruisers, scouting force, Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart.

Later he became chief of staff and aide to the president of the Naval War College.

Detached from that duty September 2, 1938, Wilcox assumed command of the special service squadron.

Wilcox is listed in Navy records as a member of the New York Yacht Club, the St. Nicholas Club of New York, the Racquet Club of Philadelphia and the Army-Navy Club of Washington.

large part a result of inadequate armament and safety equipment and insist that the proposal to man the vessels by enlisted men will not correct the situation but will, in fact, reduce the crews available. Some present seamen will be unable to pass the Navy physical requirements and others will prefer employment in factory jobs rather than enlist for the duration, it is contended.

Ship-owing groups opposed to the idea feel that their enterprises and business organizations will collapse if their vessels are taken from them. Also they fear that the collective bargaining relationships between employers and crews will be destroyed and that the whole laborious—and at times, bloody—history of conflict between 1934 and the present will have to be repeated after the war.

Under present operations, merchant vessels are leased by the Government and although they are subject to the complete control of the Army, Navy, Maritime Commission or other Federal agencies for the duration of the voyage, the owners are still responsible for staffing their vessels with officers and crew.

Navy Responsible

Under the Navy plan, the ships would be leased on a "bare boat" basis, with the Navy responsible for placing its own officers and personnel aboard.

A similar proposal was made in England in the early days of the war, but after rejection by the National Seamen's Union, it was not pressed. However, under British national conscription laws, seamen are required to stay on their jobs and may not shift to other occupations.

Jap Fliers Fail Again at Moresby

Melbourne (Tuesday), April 7 (AP). Several Japanese bombers were damaged yesterday in attacking Port Moresby, New Guinea, and two of the defending Australian fighter planes were lost, a communique said today.

One of the Allied pilots was saved, however, and the raid on Port Moresby was declared a failure.

D. C. Hotel Rooms Go Abegging—but Only on Weekends

Easter weekend found Washington's "best hotels" with rooms to spare, Edgar Morris, chairman of the Greater National Capital Committee, said yesterday.

"For the first time in the memory of local hotelmen, Washington had hundreds of vacant hotel rooms—and nobody to use them over Easter weekend," Morris said. The committee's tourist bureau found 442 vacant hotel rooms on Saturday night and 885 with no occupants Sunday night, Morris disclosed.

Among the reasons listed by Morris for the room surplus is the frequent statement made all over the country, "You can't get a room in Washington." This has been repeated so much that now people believe it, he said.

Although rooms may continue hard to find on weekdays, rooms are almost invariably available from Friday night to Monday morning, he said.

The Russian claim that Ghatsk was menaced by the Red army, along with Smolensk and Vyazma, was the first recent clue to the extent of Soviet operations along the main highway westward from Moscow. Gzhatsk is on the road 100 miles from the capital.

A Russian close-in against the highway on such a broad front not only would imperil main German bases of the central front but if successful, would cut off the enemy salient looping northeast to Rzhev.

Moscow radio reported that the Red army had sunk more than 300 Axis ships, shot down more than 1000 planes and destroyed hundreds of tanks and guns since the Germans invaded Russia last June 22.

Treadway Predicts Sales Tax Adoption

Suggests Lighter Burdens Than Those President Proposes

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The ranking minority member of the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday predicted that "Congress will be driven to adopt some form of sales tax" and, at the same time, suggested lighter tax burdens than those proposed by President Roosevelt.

Amid growing indications that most, if not all, of the ten Republicans on the committee are turning to the sales tax as an alternative to the Administration's proposals for tremendous increases in individual and corporation income taxes, Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, chided the Treasury Department with "lack of imagination" for continuing to "overwork the income tax which has borne the brunt of all tax increases since 1932."

Additional Borrowing Urged

"It is quite evident that the committee and the Congress will be driven to adopt some form of sales tax . . . however much objection there may be to such a tax under normal conditions."

Another minority committeeman said that "Republicans on the committee feel that present taxes already are burdensome and new sources of revenue must be found."

Treadway, until yesterday one of the leading members of the pay-as-you-go school of Government finance, declared, in effect, that a part of the nine billion dollars the Administration wants to raise by tax increases should be acquired through additional borrowing.

"I always have been a strong advocate of a pay-as-we-go policy, but at the present rate of expenditures, involving an outlay of 59 billions in the coming fiscal year, it would not only be impracticable but impossible to realize," he said.

No Definite Figure

"In my opinion, we should not try to raise all of the nine billions of additional taxes requested by the President at this time. The benefits to be achieved by victory over the Axis powers will inure to posterity as well as to the present generation of taxpayers, and there is no reason, therefore, why future taxpayers should not share some of the cost."

Treadway was hesitant about naming a "definite figure" for increased taxes, but added that "it seems clear that we can at least dispense with the proposed increase in social security taxes." (The Treasury has proposed a two-billion-dollar increase in social security taxes and seven billions in other taxes.)

Treadway proposed a "special war tax, to be paid by all the people." He added that he also favored increasing income taxes, "but not as high as the Treasury proposes." He also would close the tax loophole in nine "community property" States where one-half the husband's income is attributed to his wife who files a separate return.

Representative Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, another committee member, said that in normal times he would not favor a sales tax, but added that "these are not normal times."

Easter Monday—132,000 Roll Eggs; Heat Leaps to 91; Sailboat Capsizes

CONGRESSWOMAN PLAYS HOSTESS TO EGG ROLLERS—War shifted the scene of Easter egg-rolling from the White House to the Capitol lawn. Senator Hattie Caraway (seated, center) played hostess for a while to the youngsters

. . . BUT THE WATER WAS COLD—Summer-like weather made Rock Creek tempting to these girls. However, they found it colder than they expected. Left to right—Doris Phillips, 336 Twelfth Street Southeast; Shirley Baker, 23 Bryant Street Northeast, and Evelyn Russell, 2400 Second Street Northeast

A BIG DAY FOR LITTLE SISTERS—Beverly Gay (left), 2, and her sister, Janice Ward, 4, of 413½ Fifteenth Street Southeast, were more interested in the sweet things in their baskets than they were in actually rolling eggs. The sisters were among those who spent Easter Monday at the Zoo

Throngs Visit Parks; Boys Swim to Shore

In heat of almost enough intensity to cook eggs any fashion, an estimated 132,000 Washington children and adults went to grassy slopes, parks and playgrounds and rolled all the eggs they could find yesterday in tribute to an Easter custom difficult to trace down.

While the children rolled the colored eggs, or threw them at each other, or simply stood around in the shady places looking at them, their elders reclined in the shade.

The weather observers were recording a sudden heat which leaped upward to 91 degrees at 4:30 p. m. from a tolerable 75 degrees at 11 a. m.

Ira Coleman, Negro, 51, of 921 O Street Northwest, was carried from a construction job to Providence Hospital, felled by the heat, the first prostration of 1942.

The worst battered backyard in America once a year, the White House south lawn, was closed to the egg rollers, egg throwers, egg tramplers and those who lend moral support. This was because of the war.

So the rollers used the Capitol's west lawn. Police estimated an attendance of 10,000

Ostensibly they went to roll Easter eggs. Actually they sought the warmth of earth under foot, the fragrance of magnolia and cherry blossom, the sound of a robin in the rhododendra and the drip of sap from a split-boled maple.

It was the third time is as many wars that the pageant of Easter egg rolling was transferred from the White House lawn to the west-slanting grounds of the Capitol.

This business of rolling an egg down a hill and then chasing it is dull after the first couple of times, the children found. They discovered it was more fun to leave the eggs on the top of the hill, roll down themselves, shouting, "Look out, I'm a tank!"

Since President Andrew Jackson opened the White House grounds to egg rolling, the formal ceremony of greeting spring has continued each year on the lawn of the Executive

Elaine Lawson, 3, of 526 Somerset Place Northwest, Took Her Basket to the Takoma Park Playground

Mansion except during the Civil War and the World War I, and now, World War II.

The Zoo attracted an estimated 22,000 mostly Negro men, women and children, a let-down from the approximately 40,000 persons who splattered the grass with yolks and whites there last Easter Monday. All the animal houses were kept locked up and the cleaning up bill, if past costs prevail, will be $800.

There were 39 playgrounds open to the rollers and congregating in these throughout the day were 100,000 adults and children, who scrambled egg rolling with baseball, tennis, and horseplay. This 100,000 estimate was made by George Mills White, supervisor of WPA recreation for the District, after a visit around.

The day was unusually uneventful, so far as untoward incidents went. Reginald H. Kennison, 4, Negro, of 219 R Street Northwest, went forth to roll some eggs, got lost and was located by police at Sixth and G Streets Northwest. Only 31 children were lost at the Zoo and all were found, while the day here, otherwise, was celebrated with one stabbing. Police said everything else was fairly quiet in connection with the rolling.

Three would-be seamen on vacation from Roosevelt High School yesterday took a 14-foot "Marconi rig sailboat out for a sail and wound up having to swim back to shore with it.

A spanking breeze capsized their boat in the Anacostia River south of the Sousa Bridge and gave them a thorough drenching. Fully clothed, the boys struggled in the water until they had furled the sails and righted the boat; then they swam with it to the east bank of the river.

The three boys were Walter Tolson, 15, of 1332 Farragut Street Northwest, owner and builder of the craft; Eugene Fry, 17, of 917 Ingraham Street Northwest, and John Scott, 16, of 4306 Arkansas Avenue. Fry is a senior at the high school and the other two are juniors.

Harbor Police called by an observer on shore obligingly towed the boat back to its normal mooring on the west side of the river north of the bridge.

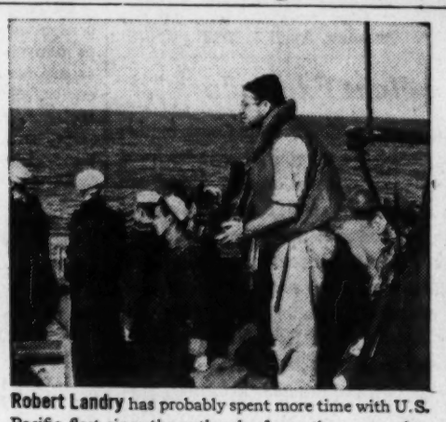
Ralph Morse, 24, is the youngest photographer on the LIFE staff, has been in Hawaii for the past two months on war assignment. Previously he had spent 10 days at Fort Benning, Georgia, taking pictures for LIFE's photographic essay on "How to Shoot a Machine Gun."

Carl Mydans, was captured with his wife in January by the Japanese at Manila. One of the most famous photographers of World War II, he covered four different wars in the past two years for LIFE—in Finland, in France, in China and in the Philippines.

Margaret Bourke-White is the only photographer not a Russian or German who has taken pictures on the Russian front. Especially memorable were her photographs of Stalin and the bombing of the Kremlin. Arriving in Moscow by way of Hong Kong and Chungking, she returned from Archangel to England by convoy and then flew back to the United States.



Robert Landry has probably spent more time with U.S. Pacific fleet since the outbreak of war than any other photographer. At sea on December 7 with a Navy Task Force, Landry later took LIFE's pictures of the Navy's raid on the fortified Gilbert and Marshall Islands.

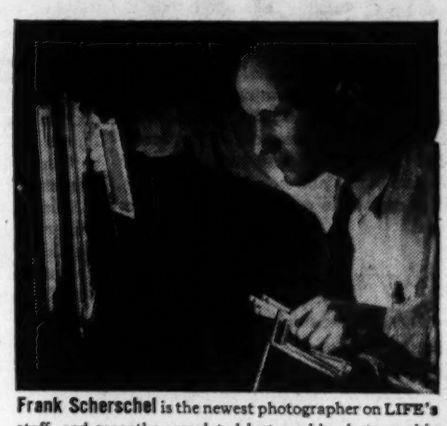
Alfred Eisenstaedt, shown here photographing a baby contest, is one of the world's greatest photographers. A specialist in people and patterns, he took the photographs for LIFE's story on West Point, which was awarded first prize as the "best educational story" in 1941.

Hart Preston arrived last week in Ankara, Turkey. Credited with having taken the best pictures of the Pan-American Conference at Rio, he flew over 8,000 miles up the Amazon with President Vargas, covered Chile's Fifth Column and Pan-American air bases in Brazil.

George Rodger, one of LIFE's photo-reporters, is now with British armed forces in Burma. He took the pictures of the American "Flying Tigers" in Burma which appeared recently in LIFE. Rodger has spent the last 20 months in Africa, the Middle East, India.

David Scherman is now on assignment in London. Rescued from the ZamZam, he got exclusive pictures of the sinking, and life on the German raider. He took the beautifully photographed enactment of "This Above All" in England, also the first A.E.F. landing in Ireland.

William Shrout, who did LIFE's recent picture-story on "Florida at War" joined LIFE's staff in 1940 after having set a record by taking 2 out of 3 successive "Pictures of the Week." He covered Wendell Willkie's Presidential campaign, Great Lakes Naval Training Station athletes.



Frank Scherschel is the newest photographer on LIFE's staff, and recently completed last week's photographic essay in LIFE on the assembling of an air task force for foreign duty. Now on special war assignment, he has in the past worked mainly in the Middle West.

William Vandivert just returned from Cuba where he covered the Brooklyn Dodgers' training camp. From 1939 to 1941 he was LIFE's chief European photographer in London where he covered the Blitz on London, R.A.F. sorties, British defenses at Gibraltar.

John Phillips has just completed pictures on "A Typical American Family at War." Phillips knows war and its impact on people well from his four years in Europe where he was an eye witness of the German occupation of both Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Wallace Kirkland returned last month to Australia to cover that important fighting front. He was also on assignment in Australia and New Zealand last year after having spent six months in India where he set a record for pictures taken on any single assignment—over 3,000.

Bernard Hoffman, a first-line photographer covering the Home Front started as an office boy in LIFE's New York office. He almost froze when he recently photographed "Winter in Maine"... took the brilliant series of color pictures for LIFE's story on Rockefeller Center.

Thomas D. McAvoy, LIFE's top Washington man, has photographed President Roosevelt oftener and more ably than any other cameraman. He has covered Washington and Washington celebrities for the past four years, was the first to photograph the U. S. Senate in session.

Peter Stackpole, who recently spent three weeks on an aircraft carrier taking pictures of our Navy's air force, flew in practically every type of Naval plane. Among the first members of LIFE's photographic staff, he was one of the first specialists in candid photography. Stackpole is probably best known to most LIFE readers for his pictures of Hollywood stars.

George Strock has spent the last 6 months covering the Home Front. Memorable among his jobs are the close-up of typical Army Private Teed, an index of Army Vehicles, Texas U. football, and Gulf Coast shipping. When France fell, LIFE sent him to Vichy for pictures.

Eyes for the Minds of America

TO HAVE a clear understanding of the war, Americans must see how the fighting goes—the battlefields, soldiers, weapons, geography, people, cities, industries.

To have a satisfactory goal, Americans must see what the fighting is for, all the manifestations of democracy and our way of life.

LIFE shows these things with all the reality, simplicity and scope of life itself—so that every issue is eagerly and easily read by 21,900,000 people.

To do this job requires a large, far-flung staff of photographers, writers, and editors.

Here, for example, are 17 of LIFE's staff photographers. They are a few of the hundreds of LIFE cameramen and reporters on assignment in this country and abroad, getting the pictures and writing the stories that you'll see in LIFE next week or next month.

Each week they send approximately 3,000 pictures and more than 50,000 words of news dispatches to the desks of LIFE's editors.

It is through the skill, ingenuity, intelligence, and world-wide teamwork of these men and women in the field, and LIFE's editors, writers, and researchers that LIFE fulfills its continuing purpose of being the "Eyes for the Minds of America."

Excellent Example

The eight major Pacific Coast manufacturers of aircraft who have just agreed to exchange information and coordinate their facilities have set a splendid example to all producers of war material. As a matter of fact, their present action merely formalizes what for some time has been the practice of individual companies. Even before Pearl Harbor the aircraft industry in the United States had seen and acted on the need for a thoroughgoing integration of effort on the part of rival producers with the view of avoiding unnecessary duplication and giving all the producers in the field the benefit of the experience and the special facilities of each. The establishment by the Douglas, Consolidated, Lockheed, North American, Northrop, Ryan, Vega and Vultee firms of the Aircraft War Production Council is an outgrowth of such earlier practices.

Not the least interesting and significant aspect of this move is that it short-circuits that bottleneck of bottlenecks—Washington. The council's headquarters will not be in the Capital, a continent removed from the member firms, but in Los Angeles. The company heads will thus be enabled to avoid having to rush to Washington on any and every occasion to participate in meetings and discussions which can so much more easily be held on the spot. They will thus be able to concentrate on the task which they are so superbly equipped to do, namely, turn out planes. It is, therefore, far more than the expression of a mere hope for the signatories of the message to Donald Nelson informing him of the creation of the Aircraft War Production Council to say that their object in forming this body is "to speed the victory of the United States and her Allies." Their action is certain to contribute directly to that end.

Pelley's Arrest

A visitor to these shores who had ample opportunity to observe Fifth Column activities abroad recently declared that we badly need a redefinition of what constitutes the furnishing of aid and comfort to the enemy. He was referring particularly to the continued appearance of printed matter or of public statements which foment social unrest and which thereby play in with the moral strategy of the Axis. Apparently Attorney General Biddle has been thinking along the same line. For the Department of Justice's arrest of William Dudley Pelley, the Silver Shirt leader, on the charge of sedition, is in its broader sense an attempt to redefine or to make clear beyond reasonable doubt what may be published or said publicly in wartime.

Mr. Pelley is accused, under the Espionage Act of 1917, of making and distributing false statements intended to harm the United States and to promote the success of its enemies. Presumably he will be held for trial either in regular session or before a special grand jury. In either case it is to be hoped that the court proceedings will be given the very wide publicity they deserve. For Pelley is a symbol—and has long been a symbol—of a pseudo-American fascism that is inherently as alien as its foreign prototype. Not only he but others, before and since Pearl Harbor, have promoted ideas which, if observed, could not help but foster distrust of the Government and of national policy. They have perverted the privileges of a free press and of free speech. And so far they have been able to do this because we have been inexcusably hesitant to establish arbitrary limits of legitimate domestic comment that would apply to such individuals.

It will be the Government's job to prove malicious intent in Pelley's case. But regardless of the outcome, his trial will serve a decidedly useful purpose, if it highlights the tragic disservice to the country of Pelley and of others who share his un-American views. In wartime, above all, such views cannot be circulated without disrupting unity on the home front. This is well understood in Europe. It ought to be well understood over here. But since it isn't, the sooner the Department of Justice acts, the sooner the public will be in a position to recognize—and to reject—subversion when they see or hear it.

Building To Win

The business of purging defensive thought is, it seems, a tedious and long-drawn-out affair. Take, for example, the specious slogan, "Hawaii Must Be Held," which pops up somewhere almost every day. Unwittingly Army and Navy censors in Honolulu contributed to its spread when they permitted correspondents in the Territory to cable an editorial appearing in the Honolulu Advertiser. The editorial was a sensible appeal for increased military and naval strength in Hawaii. But it was interpreted in some quarters over here as an indirect revelation by the armed services that Hawaii's strength was not what it should be. Hence the clarion cry: Hold Hawaii!

Of course we must hold Hawaii. Of course we must pour into the islands just as many troops and just as much materiel as are necessary to guarantee island security. But we must do this in the first instance, not, as the familiar argument runs, because Hawaii is the bulwark of our Pacific defense, the outer bastion of West Coast security. We must do it because Hawaii is the logical springboard of our inevitable advance on the enemy's stronghold—Japan proper. When the time comes we may have to make that advance via island stepping-stones which are now in Japan's possession.

This is, indeed, traditional Pacific strategy. Yet nothing that has happened so far in the war discounts it. In fact, the Navy's thrusts at the Marshall and Gilbert group, and at Marcus and Wake Islands—designed, among other things, to feel out Japanese strength there—tend to confirm that strategy. The Japanese, it may be assumed, are perfectly aware of this. So in these circumstances there will almost certainly be another attack on Hawaii, perhaps many attacks, to cripple our striking power. And should the Japanese be even partially successful in this endeavor, supposing we were preparing a grand naval offensive, the moral and material effect might well be disastrous.

This, then, is the thought to bear in mind when we talk of holding Hawaii. Build up our strength there by all means, so that if and when the enemy makes his thrust, it will be repulsed with minimum losses. But build up our strength to help win the war in the Pacific, not to save the West Coast or Chicago, or, for that matter, Washington.

Whose Armory?

Many local residents must be wondering what has happened to the immense National Guard Armory built during the last two years at a cost of $2,710,000 to the District. That curiosity is the more intense because the armory was authorized by Congress in preference to schools, hospitals, a new home for the Aged and Infirm, a Children's Receiving Home and various other local projects which the community desperately needs. Many believed also that the armory was not a proper charge against District funds, since the local government has no control whatsoever over the District National Guard. But, of course, Congress had the last word. The local improvements were delayed and most of them cannot now be erected because they are not on the priority lists.

Some satisfaction may be found in the fact that the armory is being put to good use by the War and Navy Departments. It affords space for files, offices and so forth. The building is almost completed now, and has been occupied for about six months. Yet no rent is being paid to the District for its use. Negotiations on this subject are now going forward, and, of course, the Government is under obligation to pay the District a fair rental for all the time the armory is occupied by the Army and Navy units. The ironical fact remains that local funds were diverted from hospitals, health centers, schools and welfare institutions to finance a project that should have been a charge against the National Government.

Ceylon Raid

At Colombo on Easter Sunday the Japanese were hoist by their own petard. That day saw an attempt by the Japanese to repeat against Ceylon the coup which four months earlier they had so successfully carried out against Pearl Harbor. And they suffered the most serious aerial setback of the war.

Since the fall of Malaya and Java, of course, a Japanese attack on Ceylon had moved into the orbit of probabilities. For Ceylon is the seat of the only important British naval base east of Aden, namely, Trincomalee, on Ceylon's east coast. The Japanese may have calculated that the bulk of Ceylon's defensive strength would be concentrated at Trincomalee, and that there would not be enough left to protect other points on the island. In other words, by raiding Colombo rather than Trincomalee the enemy hoped to catch the British by surprise as well as to wreak destruction on Ceylon's capital and metropolis. The results show, however, that this time it was not the British but the Japanese who were taken by surprise. Of the 75 planes which, according to British calculations, participated in the raid on Colombo, 27 were shot down, an additional 5 were probably destroyed, while 25 other planes were damaged. The strong likelihood is that these latter never got back to their carrier.

It must not be assumed from this, however, that the danger either to Ceylon or to India has been averted. This would be wishful thinking of a dangerous variety. Indeed, within two days of the raid on Colombo Japanese planes, operating from an aircraft carrier in the Bay of Bengal, bombed two Indian coastal cities north of Madras. A Japanese naval force of undisclosed dimensions would thus seem to be operating in the Indian Ocean. Unless superior naval power is mustered against it, it may do considerable damage to Allied shipping in that sea.

Still the destruction by the British of so large a percentage of the Japanese raiding force that sought to bomb Colombo is gratifying and encouraging news. It proves again that where the odds are anything approaching even Japan is no match for the United Nations.

After Army Day

Except in wartime, when—as was the case yesterday—we let ourselves go with patriotic zeal, Army Day has never been an occasion to excite the American people. We have been too steeped in pacifism to take more than passing notice of our martial achievements. We have simply tolerated our puny military establishment. We have grudged Army appropriations. We have never extended to the soldier the status in our society which he occupied in other countries. We have even shunned the study of war. Perhaps there were many people who, watching the parades yesterday, longed and prayed for the return of those halcyon days.

But, while we may share the prayer in so far as it seeks to invoke the day of peace with victory, we should be foolish to sink back into the national habit of unpreparedness. The price we have paid for this neglect need not be stressed. What is little appreciated is that in this respect we have been untrue to the founding fathers. They wrote civilian control into the Constitution, but they planned that we should always be alert to the need of military training. For that purpose they assumed a national militia accustomed to arms. For that purpose they provided for institutions which were expected to foster military knowledge. They imagined that in nongovernment institutions, moreover, study in military affairs would be provided as a matter of course. "We must train and classify the whole of our male citizens," Jefferson wrote to Monroe, "and make military instruction a regular part of collegiate education. We can never be safe till this is done."

In all likelihood most of those who watched the parades yesterday were even ignorant of our American contributions to the technology of war. Yet these contributions have been notable. Even in colonial days our soldiers were the first to develop the fundamental tactic of taking cover. In winning our independence and later in our Civil War, we passed on many lessons to the world's tacticians. Having an insufficient arsenal upon which to draw, we eked out our deficiency with skilled marksmanship. That demonstrated the value of concentrated fire power. Then we inaugurated what is regarded as the modern tactic of the "scorched earth" by such methods as the destruction of bridges. Our pioneer labors in industrial research supplied a paraphernalia of weapons for modern war. For it was we who introduced the rifle with interchangeable parts, the machine gun, the balloon and the airplane, the tractor for tanks, the parachute, the dive bomber, the submarine. Harnessed to Mars in the hands of our enemy, they are the reasons that we—of this richest and most powerful Nation—are still compelled to remain on the defensive.

This is all a testimony to the fact that we have never been a military Nation. At the same time the record is that we can be warlike if the need arises. We have the mechanical genius. We have the resources. No longer are we content to call them "war potential" in the hope that such a mass of latent power would scare away our enemies. Now the need has arisen, we are translating both the genius and the resources into actual implements of war. And the translation, as Donald M. Nelson assures us, is proceeding according to schedule. What the Nation saw on parade yesterday was the men who will handle and use those weapons. They made an inspiring sight. They were a cross section of that "massed angered force of humanity," in the President's words, which cannot be denied victory. Battles have been lost because we have not been militaristic, but the war will be won because that force of humanity has turned warlike to restore its liberties.

GARDEN OF SNOW

Have you seen the garden
Where there grow
The small, white flowers
Of the snow?
There is no sun,
No rain . . . so high
Is that cloud-hill
In winter's sky.
The snow-plants
Rise from ground
As soft as sleep,
Without a sound.
Suddenly in the winter night
The stem and leaves
Are filled with light,
And within the silver hour
Blooms the star,
The white snow-flower.

Hitching Bikes

War workers around Washington are not going to ride their bicycles to town and leave them protected against being stolen, while they themselves go about their war work—no, not if the District police have anything to say on the subject.

If Mr. Leon Henderson, his attractive secretary—the one who rides in the bicycle basket—or anyone else has any doubts on this score, let him ride his bike to town some fine morning and "hitch" it to a tree or post. When he returns at nightfall his face will be red, because his bike will be missing. This will not necessarily be because thieves have stolen the bike. More likely it will be because the police, with their tiny sacksaws, can cut manfully through any bicycle's padlock and chain.

Should the bicycle's owner be so bold, furthermore, as to go to the precinct station and ask for his bike back, the desk sergeant will say: "Use any tree or post in the District freely, just so long as you don't hitch your bicycle to it. That is violating the law." The point is, of course, that leaning your bicycle against the tree or post is all right, providing you leave it unhitched, so that the first thief that comes along can make way with it. But once you hitch the bike to the tree, thwart the would-be thief and protect your property, you violate the law. Then the police become very much interested.

That, as I am reliably informed, is the District law today in wartime Washington. L. C. N.

Defends Labor's Benefits

I should like to challenge the letter printed in The Post, April 4, signed by Audi Alteram Partem.

He attacks our Government and also has Hitler's ideas about labor unions, the 40-hour week and all social legislation which benefits the common people.

The labor unions have voluntarily pledged no strikes in defense industries, forfeited double time for Sundays and holidays. A. F. of L. unions right here in Washington have given $130,000 cash to the District Defense Council. Union men man the merchant ships that face the enemy and compose a good percentage of our armed forces.

This man quotes Lincoln hoping that we will forget how Lincoln fought just such attitudes as his. He uses Lincoln's name in attacking labor—Lincoln who was the greatest friend of the workingman and said, "Thank God we live in a country where men have the right to strike."

Meanwhile, all loyal Americans should remember the warning of Vice President Wallace, "It is the solemn duty of all patriotic Americans to fight the enemy within our gates." WM. MURPHY.

Washington, April 4.

Asia Policy

It is apparent that Great Britain will finally, with her back to the wall and with the Japs at the threshold of India, give the Indians the independence Gandhi and other Indian leaders have been demanding for generations.

American influence should be exerted to force a liberal policy toward native elements throughout the British Empire. This would not only hasten the triumph of the Allied Nations, but would save American lives and money. British imperialism, which for centuries has brought the wealth of the colonies to England to maintain in splendor the luxurious nobility of that island, should be informed that Americans are not fighting for its preservation.

Gen. MacArthur says that our soldiers must be told for what they are fighting. When the Nigerians asked if they were included in the Atlantic Charter the answer was no. Ethiopia has become a British colony—in which the natives are kept in subjection for future exploitation. This is not what America is fighting to preserve. The natives of all colonies in Asia and Africa should be trained and promised their freedom as soon as they demonstrate their ability to govern themselves.

Throughout the world the same principles adopted by America in the Philippines, which have made possible the magnificent stand of MacArthur's Army, should be applied at once not only from an altruistic motive, but for our own preservation.

The British refused the Burmese dominion status, and they and the Malays revolted and helped the Japs, who promised them their freedom. The Dutch lost their East Indies because they had not trained the natives and developed them to govern themselves. No people will fight to preserve their own subjection.

We Americans are now maintaining the arsenal for the United Nations and soon will have the largest Army; since we will be making the greatest contribution for success in this fight for freedom, we should take the lead diplomatically and proclaim to all subject peoples, including the Jews, Poles, Serbs, Asiatics and Africans, that we are carrying the torch of freedom to all peoples throughout the globe. Then they will rally to our banners and we will win.

HOWARD D. WOODSON.

Washington, April 5.

MacArthur

Who is the man who plans and then follows through regardless of numbers opposing? MacArthur.

Who is the man who is loved by all his comrades regardless of race or creed? MacArthur.

Who is the man who all red-blooded Americans are proud to honor? MacArthur.

Who is the man whose judgment and courage has stood the test? MacArthur.

Who is the man who evades all the snares and traps of the Japs? MacArthur.

Who is the man who had the good judgment to select the right man to take his place in the defense of Bataan? MacArthur.

Who is the man who is an able statesman as well as a military strategist? MacArthur.

Who is the man who has measured up 100 per cent in dependability, integrity, courage, valor, military judgment and all-around true Americanism? MacArthur.

Some Names For The War

I notice that the President has requested the newspapers to find a name for the present war.

I submit herewith a few titles which I trust will be helpful in arriving at a suitable name: All Out to Win War, The War of Democracy, The War of Nations, Everybody's War, War of Freedom or Slavery, War of the Just, Do or Die War, the War of Wars, Christianity Against Paganism, The War of the United Democracies.

WILLIAM T. DAVIS.

Upper Marlboro, Md., April 4.

This is the People's War.

That is a title psychologically significant and a propaganda weapon.

It is the war in defense of freedom.

Let mankind make it The Last War.

That would be the perfect title.

It is the battle for democracy.

It will be won when every man and woman in the United Nations says: "It is my war!"

It must be won with a peace that enforces political and economic sanity, to remove the couses of conflict — otherwise the present world war is only the prelude to chaos. ERIC PALMER, Sr.

Washington, April 4.

Although I am a citizen of France, I have been residing in the United States since June 8, 1939, coming here on the immigration quota visa, on my own affidavit, and having taken my first American papers, I feel entitled to take the liberty of suggesting the following title, and I am stating the reason why: The Humanistic War.

The people of today, besides having the fighting spirit of yesterday, know also how to express it:

1. By the choice of their statesmen.
2. By establishing schools everywhere and educational centers enabling every one of us to make thorough studies.
3. By their philosophers.
4. By their writers, who, thanks to God, have familiarized us (all those who want to be) with the past, thus making possible for many of us to lay now solid foudations for the unification of humanitarians, as never before, and make it so that there shall be no place for any despot. FLORA GRAMBER.

Washington, April 4.

Here is my contribution: Liberation War, or The War for Peace—which, I know, will sound equally good in many of the languages spoken by the United Nations. DELIA DANNO.

Washington, April 3.

I submit the following as representing the first letter of the names of the countries with which we are at war. It also might suggest what they will soon be doing—i. e., Jig War. WYATT L. LAW.

Washington, April 4.

The War for Freedom, or The War for World Freedom. GUY L. CARTER.

Rockville, Md., April 4.

The most approriate name for this bloody war is The Free-Man War. PATRICK SULLIVAN.

Toronto, Oontario, April 4.

If you want to be perfectly honest, but unconventional, why not call it The Devil's War. All of it's purposes and practices comport with his teachings, so he must have something to do with it ROY GOFF.

Washington, April 6.

My contribution is Liberty Eclipse War. MARK MELLOR.

Hagerstown, Md., April 4.

May I suggest as a name for the present war: War for International Freedom. MRS. GENE TIPPIN.

The Post Impressionist

Fond Memory

My first glimpse of the "harmless" Japan of those days came in the autumn of the year 1912, when I spent about six weeks exploring what then seemed a delightful, albeit sometimes absurd, exotic land. My last glimpse came in 1921, with several intervening visits, and I find it horrible to think of this new Japan—whom we must relentlessly crush, if we are to live—when I remember the courteous, gentle, smiling people, as I thought I knew them.

A fortnight out of San Francisco there appeared in the misty dawn the snow-capped cone of Fujiyama gleaming on the horizon, and the Japanese crew and passengers made the low obeisance, accompanied by the audible sucking-in of breath, the Japanese gesture of respect and reverence. The brief, perfunctory landing formalities completed, we "Griffins" (tenderfoot newcomers to the Orient) began our flood of new experiences immediately, riding to the hotel in rickshaws, in Yokohama traffic that kept to the left—as it does all over the Far East, even under the American Flag in the Philippines. It was my first time in a vehicle pulled by another human being, and although I afterward rode in many rickshaws, palanquins and litters, pulled and borne by sweating Orientals, from Japan to Singapore, I never could get used to it: I always felt I partook of the degradation—a feeling the Orientals didn't seem to share.

A schoolmate in a European boarding school some years before had been a Japanese prince (he afterward died in Siberia in 1918) and when we were all parting at graduation he gave a blanket invitation, "If any of you fellows ever get to Japan, look me up." I must have been about the first to have done so, although on that graduation morning, I had not expected ever to see Japan. However, in Tokyo the day after disembarking, I sent him a "chit," stating my arrival for a brief visit, and that I should like to renew acquaintance, receiving a "chit" in reply that a carriage would call at the hotel for me at 4 o'clock. At about that hour the Japanese equivalent of a bellhop came to my room, goggle-eyed with reverence and, sucking in his breath, told me in the best pidgin-English he could muster that "Imperial carriage down in compound; you comego." I disregarded the "imperial" part of the message, ascribing it to language difficulties, his, and mine. But when I descended to the compound there actually was a two-horse carriage, with coachman and footman in modified imperial livery, and the golden imperial chrysanthemum-crest emblazoned on the doors. To state that the imperial visitant was causing a sensation is masterly understatement; it had brought all compound activity to a standing, bowing halt! Something told me I should "dress," so I fled back to my room and changed into formal morning dress. The quickest I've ever changed clothes. There followed a brief drive through the streets, with policemen saluting, and myself raising my "topper" in reply, hoping I was doing the right thing, and not making myself ridiculous! Arrived at the small "detached palace" where my quondam schoolmate lived, he came bounding down the steps, both hands extended, welcoming me in fluent, slangy French, the only common language we had, as he knew no English, and I knew no Japanese. It was the first time I had ever seen him in kimono, and what with the passage of the years and the strangeness of the scene, I hardly knew him. As soon as we were alone in a room I said, "Look here, Yamamoto (which was not his name), why this imperial touch? Just how close to the throne are you?" We had never taken his title very seriously in school. He replied, "I'm a kind of nephew-cousin," and shrugged it off, and never referred to the subject again. Space doesn't permit my going into further details about this visit.

In 1912 Japan was really in transition, with the old still predominating over the new, and the new intruding on the old in sometimes unconsciously funny fashion. In the coastal cities many men wore kimonos topped by bowler hats. All the civil servants and many of the merchants engaged in foreign trade wore complete European costume during working hours, which costume they detested as being uncomfortable, unhygenic and nonesthetic. Consequently, in the commuters' trains bearing these gentry from Tokyo, Kobe, or Osaka to their suburban homes at eventide, you could see dozens of them divesting themselves of the hated Western clothes, right down to the buff, donning their kimonos with sighs of relief, and flicking open their flimsy newspapers, while they sat crosslegged on the seats!

But away from the miscalled "treaty ports," in the interior of the islands, you came across conditions that hadn't changed in centuries. Many elderly people remembered the "opening up" of 1853. Many middle-aged people deplored the Westernizing of their land. The Occidental visitor soon learned to bow and suck in the breath; not to have done so would have seemed rudeness. In truly rural communities in the evenings you got bravely used to the startling sight of groups of friends strolling home from the village baths in the dimly lit streets, wearing their kimonos over their arms—and wearing nothing else—bowing and smiling their "sayonaras" (goodnights) at cottage doors. But these people would have been profoundly shocked at a burlesque strip-tease.

Baseball had recently been introduced, and to see kimono-clad schoolboys sliding for home, and hear the umpire announcing the score in English—apparently because there were no Japanese equivalents for "strike," "base" and "out"—was a refreshing experience. The frank, friendly curiosity of country-folk who would finger your coatsleeve and trouserleg, asking what queer cloth you were wearing, and their smiling willingness to take you into their homes, were disarming.

If only that kind of Japan could have continued! The military clique of Fuehrer-imitators now in the saddle have ruined the country, and will drag it down to destruction. Not even the other Oriental peoples can stomach the new Japan. Puppets may be set up in China, the Philippines and Malaya, but the puppets will be knocked down again, for the Chinese, Malayans and other Orientals hate and fear this terrible new Japan!

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Empire And English-Speaking World

IN THE RELATIONS between the East and the West, the historical record is certain to be far more enlightening than any political formula which can be devised in a time of crisis. The United States is at war in Asia, and in this war we have a principal part to play, not as the arsenal of the United Nations, but as a fighting power. For that reason it is necessary that we and our Allies should seek to see clearly what we are fighting for in Asia, and how we mean to achieve our ends.

LIPPMANN

On these crucial points the only sure evidence is the record of experience.

WE HAVE had commerical and political relations with the Orient since the earliest days of American independence. A vessel, called the Empress of China, left New York for Canton in 1784, and on its return, Maj. Samuel Shaw, of Boston, was on Secretary John Jay's recommendation made consul at Canton. Our relations with Japan cover the 90 years since the visit of Commodore Perry. In this long relationship there has been only one short period—at the beginning of this century—when, having conquered the Philippines, the United States displayed the symptoms of imperialistic ambition.

The ambition, however, had no roots in American sentiment and no foundation in American interest, and very quickly it evaporated. This short imperialist interlude and what has followed have made it very clear indeed that the controlling American purpose in the Far East is trade and cultural intercourse, and that to achieve this purpose we rely on two things: primarily, upon the desire of the peoples of Asia to be independent, and second upon using our own force to support them in resisting conquest and dismemberment. We have regarded our own profit as dependent upon equality of trade, and our own security as closely bound up with the independence and security of the Asiatic peoples.

IN SO FAR as we have failed in the East, it has not been in extending our power in Asia but in not taking sufficient trouble to be strong enough to give quick and decisive assistance to our natural allies. For all Asiatic peoples —the Koreans, the Chinese, the Filipinos, the Indians—when they resist conquest and dismemberment—are the natural allies of the United States. Our security in the Pacific and their independence in Asia are the two sides of the same shield, and this fact, more than any declarations we sign with them, is the basic community of our aims.

The acid test has been applied —persuasively, we believe, in the Philippines, and conclusively in China. In the long negotiations which preceded Pearl Harbor, we were offered not merely peace with Japan, but even a junior partnership with Japan—provided we would connive at the conquest of China. We are at war with Japan because we rejected this proposal. Let us be very candid because candor is better than fine rhetoric. We rejected the Japanese proposals not as crusaders for the freedom of the world, not only because there is in America great affection and deep admiration for the Chinese, but fundamentally because the independence of China is vital to the security of the United States. The Chinese, who are wise with the experience of centuries of civilized life, will recognize that such an alliance founded upon vital interest is infinitely more enduring and reliable than one founded upon sentiment or expediency. For in such an alliance as we have with the Chinese, each wants from the other only what each wants for itself—that is to say, its own national independence and national security.

IT IS on this basis, with the Chinese as our witnesses and underwriters, that we can perhaps hope to approach the people of India, and help them to believe that their independence is in fact —regardless of the difficulty of finding formulae—indissolubly bound up with the cause of the United Nations.

Here again candor is the best argument, and so it should be said that in the past two years gradually, in the past four months very rapidly, there has taken place a mighty change within the English-speaking world, and a mighty change, also, between West and East. The change is irreversible. The defeat of our enemies will confirm the change, and mark the beginning of a new order of things, not the restoration of the old. What has happened—and it is one of the supreme events of modern history—is the growing union in the West of the English-speaking democracies, and of their allies in Europe, and in the East the certain liquidation of Western imperialism. MacArthur in Australia, Cripps in India, Casey in Cairo, Churchill and Roosevelt in London and Washington, are the symbols and the agents of this momentous development.

THERE IS a very close connection, in history and in our own days, between the union or disunion of the Western democracies on the one hand, the extension or liquidation of Eastern imperialism on the other. It is no mere coincidence that the Eastern empire of Britain was founded in the same generation that the connection of the English-speaking peoples was shattered. British rule began in India in 1744. It ended in the American colonies in 1776. For a century and a half while the course of empire in Britain was towards the East, the course of America was in isolation. That epoch is now ended, the epoch of British imperialism and of American isolation.

THE NEW EPOCH began with the fall of France and the mortal peril in which not only Britain, Canada, Australia, but also the United States were placed. This peril has brought about a partnership of the English-speaking nations that is vitally closer, because the sanctions are life or death for all of us, than any which diplomacy or propaganda could imagine or contrive. This same peril has also brought about the disestablishment of the Western empires in Asia. Out of it has come a new balance of power and a new order of association in the English-speaking world; out of it has come a new balance of power and a new order of relationship with the East.

In this new order not empire but the anti-imperialism of the democratic peoples will be decisive.

From the experience of China the leaders of India can best judge what this must mean. For whatever their failings, the English-speaking nations are now an association of anti-imperialist democracies. As such they must, and therefore they will, deal with Asia as allies and not as protectors. As democracies they must, for their own security, be interested only in the desire of the Asiatic peoples to be independent and secure.

For there is nothing that the English-speaking democracies can want from Asia, or can hope to get from Asia, except that which the Filipinos, the Chinese, the Indians do freely of their own accord for their own independence, their own freedom, their own honor and dignity.

Auto Man Predicts Relaxed Rationing

Pittsburgh, April 6 (AP).—Ray Chamberlain, executive vice president of the National Automobile Dealers Association, predicted today the Government soon will relax rationing of new passenger automobiles.

"I have the word of Rolf Nugent, chief of the auto rationing section, Office of Price Administration, that the present passenger auto rationing regulations will be liberalized within the next few days," Chamberlain told a joint meeting of Allegheny County auto dealers and rationing board members.

Quezon's Health

By Ernest Santos

Doubly Jeopardized

TO THE VAST majority of Filipinos in this country no move could have been more opportune nor any wiser than the surprising transfer of President Manuel L. Quezon to Australia. Coming as it did like a bombshell at a time when other Filipino leaders like Jorge Vargas and Jose Yulo found it expedient to collaborate with the Japanese invaders, this development can only mean that Filipino resistance under the direction of Quezon will continue unabated against the aggressors.

According to Jaime Hernandez, auditor general of the Commonwealth—a post having a full cabinet rank in the island government—"the transfer of the Philippine government headed by President Quezon to Australia is the most conclusive evidence that the Filipinos and their government are determined to fight the enemies to the last alongside the Americans. Bataan and Corregidor may fall and the Japanese may, for a time, occupy the whole Philippine territory. But they can never conquer nor subdue the liberty-loving Filipinos. President Roosevelt has pledged to redeem the independence of the Philippines, and the Filipinos are now acting with that pledge as their guiding spirit."

BUT MUCH as the Filipinos in this country are jubilant about the unheralded but epochal escape of their President from the beleaguered islands, their enthusiasm is somewhat dampened by their knowledge that President Quezon had deemed it appropriate to establish the Philippine government-in-exile in Australia. Given a choice, they would much prefer that he conduct his operations from this country for two reasons. First, that Quezon and his staff may inadvertently be on the way to seriously hamper Australian offensive and defensive war preparations. Besides, his task which is purely administrative in character can be much more efficiently done in this country than in Australia where he is less acquainted with Australian methods. Second, that Quezon may perhaps irreparably impair his health, bad as it already is, by prolonging his stay in the island continent. Last high Filipino official to see him was the above mentioned Hernandez who left the islands in the latter part of 1941 and who was caught by the war with his wife in Washington. According to him, Quezon was a mere ghost of his former self, emaciated to a degree and hardly able to walk.

He said: "When I bade goodby to the President at Santol Sanitarium in New Manila, I was amazed to see that a man as sick as he was could manage the affairs of state. But Quezon did. Not only that, but he seemed to know everything that was going on in his country and in the world." Attended night and day by his two personal physicians, Miguel Canizares, director of Quezon Institute, famous for its tuberculosis therapy, and Andreas Trepp, famous Swiss specialist on white plague, Quezon, with lungs badly punctured by hemorrhages, still managed to live fully, if not joyously, on borrowed time that was rapidly and inevitably coming to a colorful climax; and to direct the administration of the Philippine government with a masterly thoroughness, characteristic of those having sound intellect and strong will power. And in all probability his illness was further aggravated not only by the strain of work which had arisen in the wake of the war but also by his great concern over the plight—a tragic one at that—which had overtaken his peace-loving people. There must be some credibility in the report that he had to be carried on a litter to his place of safety "somewhere in the Philippines." At any rate, the winter season, scheduled to envelop Australia in its grip within a month or so, is not the salubrious weather that is conducive to his recovery, but instead may probably hasten his end.

Whatever reason might have impelled Quezon to make his headquarters in Australia, the fact remains that his safety and the state of his health are of paramount importance not only to the Filipinos, but to the United Nations' war efforts in the Far East as well. For whether we like or not, Quezon is the actual embodiment of the Filipino nation and what he does and says is eagerly watched and awaited by millions of his countrymen, irrespective of tribe and religion. In the words of Resident Commissioner J. M. Elizalde, "Quezon represents today the living spirit of the Filipino people. He has been, in spite of all misrepresentations and unfair personal attacks, the true symbol of Philippine freedom. Every Filipino looks upon him as his personal leader." For all we know, Filipino resistance may collapse at his death. Here in the United States, Quezon can have the best medical attention that can be found nowhere else in the world.

THE WRITER therefore suggests that President Roosevelt should make it a point to request President Quezon to come to this country with his family. Or better still, Quezon should be persuaded to take along, too, the members of his war cabinet who would and could form the ideal nucleus for a representative Philippine government-in-exile in this country.

Of these members of the emergency Philippine war cabinet, the best known perhaps to the American people is Vice President Sergio Osmena who holds the secretaryship of the departments of public instruction and of health, and who is scheduled by law to succeed Quezon in the presidential chair a year hence. Born in Cebu City in 1878 of Chinese-Filipino parentage, he received his education at San Juan de Letran and Santo Tomas University, both in Manila. He began his political career as provincial governor of Cebu and later as the first speaker of the First Philippine Assembly in 1907. While serving as member of the islands' House of Representatives, he headed the Second Parliamentary Mission to the United States in 1922 and served as member of the succeeding legislative missions to this country afterward. He is chiefly credited for prevailing upon Congress in 1939 to extend the economic transition period as provided for in the Independence Law from 1946 to 1960. His eldest daughter, Maria, who has been taking musical lessons in New York, is now a war refugee in this country.

Among the first Philippine government students (pensionados) sent to this country to study, former Chief Justice Jose Abad Santos, who holds the triple secretaryship of the departments of finance, agriculture, and commerce, can be justly considered the all-around product of the American system of education. He attended Santa Clara College (California), University of Illinois, Northwestern University, and George Washington University in this city. Upon returning to the islands, he worked as law clerk in in the then Bureau of Justice, attorney to the Philippine National Bank, technical adviser to the First Philippine Mission to the United States in 1919, and later emerging as Secretary of Justice under Governors General Henry L. Stimson and Dwight F. Davis. A brother of the famous Filipino Communist leader, Pedro Abad Santos of Pampagna Province he has been the chief justice of the islands' supreme court since 1940.

Secretary of National Defense, Gen. Basilio Valdes was a successful surgeon who became soldier by choice. Of Spanish-Filipino descent, he was born in Manila. He taught physiology at the State University upon his graduation from the University of Santo Tomas. Finding a teaching job rather irksome for his volatile temperament, he went to Europe and joined the Allied Forces as assistant surgeon of French Red Cross Hospital No. 101. Later he became the chief of medical service of the Red Cross Commission dispatched to Albania in 1919. For his war service record, he received several medals and decorations from various foreign governments. After the armistice, he returned to the Philippines and joined the constabulary where he rapidly rose in the ranks to become brigadier general and its chief in 1934.

Secretary to the President and treasurer of the Philippines is Capt. Andres Soriano who served under Gen. MacArthur at Bataan Peninsula and who organized the Rizal Legion of Filipino snipers behind the enemy lines at his own expense. A member of the wealthy and socially elect Spanish-Filipino Roxas and Ayala families, Soriano studied at the Ateneo de Manila, Stonyhurst College (Lancashire, England), and Escuela Superior de Commerce of Madrid, Spain. Upon his return to Manila in 1917, he joined his family's profitable and vast San Miguel Brewery interests as accountant. He climbed fast and in 1924 he was appointed general manager and in 1931 was elected as president of the company. He also heads the multifarious Soriano companies, such as the Antamok Goldfields, IXL Mining Co., Masbate Consolidated, North Camarines, Eastern Development Co., International Engineering Corp., Soriano Co., Commonwealth Insurance Co., Banco Hipoticario, Central Azucarera, Philippine Iron Mines, Far East Development Co., Joanji Syndicate (Hongkong), and many others. Besides being the principal stockholder of the George Muehleback Brewery in Kansas City which owns the Lone Star Brewing Co. of San Antonio, Texas, he also holds the directorships of the following companies in Spain: Banco Urquijo, Compania Auxiliar de Ferrocariles, Organizacion, Estudios y Servicios Techicos Especializados (OESTE), Olivol, Nuevos Comustibles Nacionales, and Fomento Industrial Comercial Espanol. Of among the Spanish community in Manila, he loves best to call himself a Filipino and is not ashamed to proclaim that fact to the world.

Acting Secretary to the President, Manuel Roxas is the best representative product of the young generation of Filipino politicians. A native of Capiz province in the Visayan Islands, Roxas studied at the University of the Philippines where he graduated with honors from the college of law in 1913. He was admitted to the bar in the same year. From law professorship at the National University (Manila), he entered politics by running for the governorship of his province. He won by a large majority. He represented his provinces in the House of Representatives uninterruptedly from 1922 to 1933 and was a member of the Constitutional Convention held at Manila in 1934. From 1938 up to the outbreak of hostilities, he occupied the post of Secretary of Finance in the island government and simultaneously acted as chairman of the National Economic Council. Married to a former Manila carnival beauty queen, Trinidad de Leon, who is a member of the fabulously wealthy de Leon clan of Bulacan Province, Roxas has two children, Rosario and Gerardo, upon whom he dotes.

Wartime Washington

By Merlo Pusey

Speed-Up-And-Slow-Down Policy

POWERFUL FORCES seem to be at work to prevent the hasty construction of houses for war workers in Washington. As early as last December Federal officials outlined an enormous building program for the first six months of 1942. One has only to glance at the building permit figures to see that that program has not yet begun to click. Buildings for which permits were issued during the first quarter of the year were valued at only $7,097,718 as compaed with $11,759,915 in the first three months of 1941. In other words, this hard-pressed city has had a sharp decline in home construction instead of the enormous increase which it needs.

PUSEY

There are a number of reasons for this failure on the home front, and most of them trace to official procrastination or bungling. It is well known that delay in passing the Lanham bill for Washington and vicinity has held back the construction of public housing for war workers of low income. That measure should have been enacted at least three months ago. Instead, it went to the White House yesterday. Perhaps Congress has been amply criticized for that delay. Less has been said about the equally serious frustration of private building also designed to accommodate the city's enormous influx of war workers.

The findings of a Labor Department referee in the prevailing wage controversy are a sort of last straw upon the back of the private builders who are attempting to adjust their organizations to large-scale production of war housing. In effect, the referee concluded that the Government's low-cost dwelling must be built with high-cost wages—wages equal to those paid the most skilled craftsmen working on monumental Government projects. To be sure, this decision does not directly apply to private builders. But it is estimated that when the construction of public housing gets into full swing a few months hence it will absorb the entire labor supply. In other words, Government agencies are expected to erect more houses this summer than all public and private agencies combined built last summer. Private builders may thus be left high and dry.

THERE IS no question, of course, as to who will get the available labor supply. Wages which the ADA and other public agencies must pay are estimated to be from 27 to 128 per cent higher than those which private builders are accustomed to paying. So a sharp increase in wages appears to be in prospect. Private builders will have to come close to meeting the top union scale if they expect to hold their workmen.

It may be argued, of course, that wages paid by private builders are now too low. But we must remember that the cost of all housing to be built in this critical period is rigidly limited. Priorities cannot be obtained for any residential structure costing more than $6,000. Builders have already found it difficult to meet that limit and at the same time produce a type of housing that will not quickly degenerate into slums after the war is over. The margin of profit on these houses is said to be small. If costs are greatly increased by a rise in wages, some builders may be driven out of business in spite of the city's pressing demand for all the dwellings that can be erected.

PERHAPS more serious is the uncertainty which the decision has left hanging over the heads of private builders. They do not know whether an additional labor supply can be found, nor what wages will have to be paid to entice additional workers here. Since the cost of the houses they may construct is rigidly limited, that leaves them in a dilemma as to whether or not projects now planned can be kept within the WPB's limitations.

Add to this the fact that the FHA has exhausted its funds available for insurance of mortgages and the dilemma facing the city's home builders should be plain enough for even bureaucrats to see. Undoubtedly Congress will ultimately extend the FHA mortgage-insurance fund for war housing. While slow administrative and legislative wheels turn, however, war workers continue to pour into the city and few dwellings are ready for them.

Confusion is further intensified by the fact that the policy which is emerging doesn't make sense. Housing for the lowest-income workers is being built by the highest paid and presumably the most skilled craftsmen. Another group of semipublic projects—large-scale developments financed by FHA-insured mortgages—is built by union men paid substantially lower wages. Surely these types of buildings are comparable. But by a process of hairpin-turn reasoning a distinction is drawn for the purpose of fixing wage rates. And other housing for higher-income workers, those who can unquestionably pay their own way, is to be built, if at all, by workmen commanding still lower wages.

THIS SITUATION was clearly recognized by Ben Grodsky, Labor Department referee, in his findings on prevailing wages. "It is likely that in the absence of payment of premiums," he said, Washington builders will have to be content with a certain amount of partially skilled and partially qualified mechanics." In other words, private industry is put in a position where it can function only if there is a surplus of labor after the demands of public agencies doing the same type of work have been met.

Nor should it be supposed that the payment of top-bracket wages for the most finished type of work is an advantage to the ADA. That agency builds exclusively for low-income families. It has a constant struggle to produce dwellings that conform to even minimum standards within the cost limitations imposed upon it. At present the Lanham Act restricts the outlay per dwelling for war housing to $3750. Partly because it must pay top-notch union wage rates, the ADA asked that this limit be raised to $4000, but that provision was eliminated from the bill which went to the President yesterday. The ADA will be less seriously affected by the prevailing wage decision but only because it is already paying for workmanship suitable to monumental buildings in its construction of dwellings for the poor.

It is imposible to avoid the conclusion that the Government is trying to speed the building of houses in Washington with one hand while putting formidable obstacles in the way with the other. At the moment there seems to be grave danger that part of the program may bog down for want of a reasonable policy that would encourage a maximum effort on the part of both private and public builders.

Swiss Sugar

By Marie Widmer

Producing At Home

IN THE YEARS before the second World War, Switzerland imported considerable quantities of sugar. Statistics show that in 1934 her purchases of this commodity amounted to 18,500,000 Swiss francs. At that time, Swiss farmers had asked the government to authorize the establishment of a second sugar factory. This request was refused, but instead, permission was given for the enlargement of the existing sugar works at Aarberg in western Switzerland. This refinery was founded in 1898, is thoroughly modernized and can take care of the nation's crop of sugar beets, as well as of imports of sugar cane in normal times.

After the outbreak of the present war and the ensuing blockades, sugar became scarce in Switzerland. To overcome the shortage, cultivation of the sugar beet has been increased considerably. Regions where sugar beets are successfully grown include the cantons of Berne, Fribourg, Vaud, Valais, Soleure, Argovie, Zurich, Schahausen, Thurgau and St. Gall. Harvest time in the fall, with its resulting huge shipments to the sugar factory at Aarberg, requires highly efficient planning, especially in these days when Swiss freight cars are in uninterrupted use.

THE ENTIRE program involving the loading, transportation and unloading of the season's harvest of sugar beets is planned and carried out by the Swiss Federal Railroads. Thus in the fall of 1941 they provided for daily transports from 32 stations in the chief production centers; for transports every other day from 31 stations in other important areas, and for transports every five days from 213 stations in sections far away from Aarberg.

This arrangement enables the Aaberg sugar factory to promptly handle incoming shipments. The plant is equipped to take care of a maximum of 150 carloads of sugar beets per day, or approximately 1900 metric tons (1 metric ton = 2,204.6 pounds). Sugar beet cars reach Aarberg with ordinary freight trains from October to December. The same trains take back an equal number of empty and carefully cleaned out cars.

In pre-war days, Switzerland's yearly sugar requirements amounted to approximately 15,000 carloads. This figure included chocolate manufacture and other industries needing sugar. Toward this sugar consumption the country's only sugar factory at Aarberg produced yearly 5000 carloads of sugar.

WITH the introduction of sugar rationing in Switzerland, the national yearly consumption of this commodity has been reduced to about 7000 carloads. The sugar ration for the month of February, 1942, was 600 grammes per adult (1 gramme = 1/28 oz.). Industries using sugar have naturally been severly affected. Thus it has come about that chocolate, one of Switzerland's most famous products, while not rationed, is very scarce. With careful rationing and increased production, it will be possible for Switzerland to produce at home most of the sugar now allotted to the people.

The sugar beet is an achievement of refining the common red beet. The potentialities of this vegetable as a source of sugar were discovered in 1747. In its original state at that time the red beet yielded only 2 or 3 per cent of sugar. Improved methods of raising and scientific management of the seeds have increased the sugar contents so that it is now from 12 to 20 per cent.

Browder's Sentence Not Excessive

THE COMMUNISTS, aided by the usual crowd of horn-rimmed intellectual tag-alongs, are running another of their familiar campaigns in the interest of Earl Browder, general secretary of the party, who is serving four years in Atlanta forswearing falsely in his application for an American passport. It is contended that this sentence is excessive and a travesty on justice, and that Browder was sentenced in part for his political convictions. There are some forthright Red Communists in the agitation, which is efficiently organized and financed like the lucrative Tom Mooney campaign, which kept so many comrades in comfort so many years, but there are more of the yellow type who lack the courage to join the party and submit to the controls and exactions of party discipline. This type is composed mostly of soft-handed lawyers, singers, teachers, preachers and literary nonentities who find in such activities a means of obtaining that personal publicity on which their hungry vanity feeds. There are also among this group individuals who might be accurately described as boudoir radicals, white and colored, a type referred to by Miss Dorothy Day, the backslid bolo, in her book "From Union Square to Rome," who used political and social radicalism as an excuse for licentious conduct.

PEGLER

Because of our military collaboration with Soviet Russia, the case against Browder is somewhat embarrassed in these days of war, but that fact just calls for a little more firmness and nationalistic self-respect. Browder and his party have repeatedly disclaimed any connection with the Soviet government and he is an American citizen, convicted in an American court, after a fair trial, of an offense against an American law.

Thus the case is strictly our own affair. We would not think of intruding in a similar case in which a Russian subject was sentenced for an offense against Russian law, even though such an offender probably would have been put to death by a firing squad, a sentence far more drastic than four years in prison.

AS TO THE severity of the penalty, it must be kept in mind that the sentence was prescribed by the law-making body of the American Republic, which obviously took a very serious view of an offense which Browder and his friends condone as a mere social error.

It should be remembered, also, that when Browder was tried he was not, as his campaign publicity now says he is, "America's leading anti-Fascist," but an active pro-Axis collaborationist and leader of a force which was promoting sabotage of the American rearmament effort. His party, at that time and up to last June, when Hitler attacked Russia, was responsible for very harmful strikes at Allis-Chalmers, North American, and elsewhere, in which the people of the United States were trying to build tools of war, for lack of which not only Americans but Russians now are dying on many fields. The policy of his political group was vigorously seditious and traitorous, and his influence was exerted in the interest of Adolf Hitler and Nazis.

Wendell Willkie has joined the campaign with a suggestion that Browder was sentenced in part for his political affiliation, but that is a sly misstatement, and quite expectable from a man who could say, as Willkie did, that one of his utterances against participation in the war was deliberately insincere and only campaign oratory. If the court did throw the book at Browder on a technical conviction, that would not have been due to his political convictions, but to the dangerous anti-American expression of those convictions in the sabotage of the war industries through strikes artificially fomented over false issues and by fraudulent strike votes.

A COURT unconsciously and out of patriotism might have given weight to this consideration, but the fact still remains that the sentence does not exceed the law. In a similar but more painful case, Al Capone got nine years, most of it in Alcatraz, where he served his time the hard way, for income tax evasion, and most of us figured that this was one way to get hunk for a great many other crimes. The Communist Party didn't go to bat for Capone, however, nor did Willkie agitate himself over an assumption that he was being punished for other charges unproved in court.

There is nothing to the description of Browder as our leading anti-Fascist. He was for a long time and in a dangerous period of preparation which may yet prove to have been decisive against us, one of the most destructive pro-Fascists in the United States. He deserves no more consideration from the American President or people than his former collaborator in the Axis cause, Fritz Kuhn, who also and with equal truth, might claim that he was nailed on an irrelevant technicality and sentenced for his political convictions.

Rezoning Law For Boarding Houses Asked

To help relieve living congestion in wartime Washington, Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee yesterday introduced a bill to relax local zoning laws by permitting boarding houses in restricted residential areas for the duration of the war.

The House at the same time approved and sent to the White House the bill authorizing appropriation of 50 million dollars for war housing in the District areas. Of the amount 30 million dollars will be for single and dormitory dwelling units and 20 millions for public works to serve new residents.

The Randolph bill would permit rooming and boarding houses in those sections of the District now zoned as "A" restricted or "A" semirestricted under local regulations. Owners or operators of residences in the present restricted areas would have to obtain a special certificate to start operations.

No person will be granted a certificate if fire escapes must be erected on his house under existing safety laws, the bill specifies. It states further that when the President declares the emergency at an end, the areas shall revert to their present zoning status.

Representative Randolph said that the District Committee hopes to open hearings on the measure next week.

Praise of the measure was expressed by Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, who declared:

"It seems to me this is really an emergency measure and should be acted upon at the earliest date possible. With thousands of people seeking homes in the District and the population continuing to increase it is foolish to deny the use of dwellings to house defense workers."

In presenting the conference report on the war housing bill to the House yesterday Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, declared that temporary dormitory units for single war workers of the type proposed by the President for the Mall area, would have these benefits:

Lower construction costs; permit congenial association of workers; simplify the traffic problem; balance the local real estate market after the war by not throwing permanent Federal-built homes on the open market.

Funds to increase local hospital facilities, now taxed to capacity, are included in the 20 millions for public works, he said.

Oil Burner Blows Up in Warehouse

Explosion of an oil burner in the basement of the American Storage Co. at 2801 Georgia Avenue Northwest startled the neighborhood late last night but otherwise caused little damage. A small blaze that followed was quickly put out by firemen. A large crowd was drawn to the scene.

Md. Refuses U. S. Training School Boys

A proposal to transfer Negro training school boys from the National Training School in Washington to the Cheltenham Reformatory in Prince Georges County was overruled yesterday by William C. Walsh, Attorney General of Maryland.

Federal authorities in Washington had asked permission to transfer about 50 Negro youths from the National Training School for the duration of the war because of overcrowded conditions in the Washington reformatory. The Federal Government agreed to pay a fixed price per boy per day on the condition that the trainees be subject to the same discipline and treatment as inmates committed from the State.

Asked for an opinion by Joseph H. Blandford, president of the board of managers of the Cheltenham School, Attorney General Walsh ruled the "school is limited to the acceptance of boys committed in accordance with Maryland statutes."

The opinion stated that the board of managers of the Cheltenham School had sole rule-making power, but the exercise of that power was "limited to the passage of rules . . . not inconsistent with the laws of the State and we do not think the board would have authority to change by rule the specific provisions of the law as to the acceptance of new inmates."

"If 50 or more boys are accepted from the District of Columbia, the institution may later be unable to accept Maryland boys because of lack of room and we do not believe that the Legislature intended to permit such a situation to arise."

Girl, 18, Knifed; Hit By Auto as She Flees

After being cut with a knife early yesterday morning an 18-year-old Negro girl was struck down by an automobile while attempting to flee her attacker. She is Viola Richardson, 1747 Corcoran Street Northwest, taken to Freedman's Hospital with a broken left leg.

The girl was attacked by an unidentified Negro woman on the corner of Columbia and O Streets Northwest. While trying to escape, the girl ran between two parked cars and was hit by a passing taxicab.

Berlin Will Sing In Army Revue

New York, April 6 (AP).—Garbed in the uniform of a 1918 doughboy, Irving Berlin will sing the World War favorite, "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning,' in an Army revue planned for Broadway this summer.

The composer said the personnel for the show would be drawn entirely from Army ranks, with the title "This Is the Army" revue. Berlin's show in the last war was called "Yip, Yip, Yaphank." Berlin is expected to confer with Army officials in Washington tomorrow regarding the revue.

Rent Cut in 75% of Cases

Of 1200 cases heard by the District Rent Administration, approximately 75 per cent have resulted in reductions of rental rates, Congress learned yesterday.

Robert F. Cogswell, local rent administrator, told this last week to a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee as it considered deficiency appropriations for the District in hearings on the sixth supplemental national defense appropriation bill for 1942. Testimony was made public yesterday.

Work of the rent administration has been far heavier than was at first expected, Cogswell declared. While the agency expected to handle about 5000 cases in the first year of its operation, it already has 4850 cases on its docket after being in existence only two and one-half months, he said, adding that complaints average about 100 per day.

"I was told that there were about 5000 rooming houses in Washington, while my guess, just from having lived here all my life, is that it would be close to 15,000 before we got through," Cogswell told the subcommittee.

"We asked for a return on all rooming or boarding houses containing three or more persons paying rent. We have 9000 returns to date, and about 8500 of those reporting are out-and-out rooming houses, as differentiated from a house which really is a private home, but in which a person will rent two rooms and call it an apartment."

No criminal prosecutions have resulted under the rent act, Cogswell said.

"We threatened one, and took it as far as Police Court, and had a warrant ready to serve, and a backrent adjustment was made before the warrant was served," he added.

The act has been a "preventive" against rent increases in more than 90 per cent of these cases considered, he said, although he furnished no specific account of the amount of money saved tenants.

Approximately $100,000 will be needed to run the rent administration in 1943, Cogswell said.

The committee approved his supplemental request for $5400 to defray personnel costs during the remainder of the fiscal year.

Curtis Stockholder Sues to Change Satevepost Policy

Philadelphia, April 6 (AP).—A stockholder of the Curtis Publishing Co. asked U. S. District Court today to compel the Saturday Evening Post to abandon what he termed its "isolationist' policies and to cease publication of articles he said tended to stir up racial feeling.

In one of the most unusual suits ever filed in the Federal courts here, George E. Wanderman, of New York, declared that such policies are injurious to the financial interests of the 25,500 Curtis stockholders and ultimately will result in "complete dissipation" of the company's good will.

Wanderman, who owns 50 of the 3,393,821 shares of Curtis common stock, said that already the Post's "isolationist' policies had caused numerous subscription cancellations and that 'numerous advertisers had refused to renew their contracts. An article entitled "The Case Against the Jews," written by Milton Mayer and published in the March 28 issue of the Post, especially antagonized both readers and advertisers, the stockholder asserted.

President Remains Confined With Cold

President Roosevelt remained "under the doctor's wraps" yesterday with a discomfitting cold but saw five callers in the residence area of the White House.

The abbreviated calling list included: Secretary of the Navy Knox, David J. Lewis, chairman of the National (railway) Mediation Board; Morris L. Cooke, United States representative on a commission seeking settlement with Mexico of expropriated oil lands; Pierre Boal, new United States Ambassador to Bolivia, and Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador to Russia and Belgium.

Modern Design Forgets Beauty Says Decorator

Warns of Making Furnishings Appear Too Functional

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

WE RAN into Bill Pahmmann at the Newspaper Woman's Ball the other night . . . he's that good-looking young Texan who has been making conversation in New York because of his spectacular ideas on interior decoration and design. We had a chat with him about modern design, South America, antiques and a dozen other subjects we are both concerned about. Though most people associate his name with his more dramatic exhibitions of rooms that really do take your breath away, he certainly is not limited to "theater" . . . he is versatile in the subtle restrained type of decorating too and does beautifully illusive rooms in completely traditional mood. In short he is a veritable Jean de Reszke in the wideness of his range . . . he can be as modern as tomorrow and often is . . . he can combine modern things with antiques in audacious abandon . . . he can be as proper as you please with traditional rooms kept entirely in period.

His most recent exhibit featuring Peruvian themes introduced a whole new repertoire of colors and designs into our decorating vernacular. His special concern in the South American motif now is that we don't pervert and commercialize the talents of this great buoyant land to the South. The fresh exuberant colors, the distinctive textiles, potteries, glass, wood work, the many design influences of Inca, Mayan, Spanish Colonial and other origins are far more exciting and more valuable a contribution than the present trend toward making poor imitations of European crafts.

Modern Design

About modern design here in America, Pahlmann feels that much of it is off on the wrong foot because it has not grown out of the past but starts out in space somewhere in a self-conscious effort to be different and separates from anything that has ever gone before. Modern designers also often forget the role of beauty which is as necessary a part of life as purely utilitarian functionalism, thinks Mr. Pahlmann. His modern furniture is stimulating and important, first probably because he is very talented, second because he has a thorough training in art and design, third because he has thought through the philosophy of modern design and its function in our lives today. He has a reason for doing what he does and then he proceeds to do it with originality, charm and a blithe spirit.

It is his sound education and his real creative approach that has put him at the top of the heap and have made him in a comparatively few years the most significant name among style-makers in the decorative world today.

Fabric Handbags for Wear Into Summer

The handbag that a woman buys now should be one to carry right into summer. Faille is the all-around fabric to go with a "little" suit, a spring print or a dressmaker coat. The bag (above) made by Lewis, answers these purposes and withal is commodious enough to hold everything from a Red Cross manual to a ball of yarn. The beautifully engraved frame and compact are the last we shall see for a while, with priorities on copper and alloys. Black, brown and navy are the colors available. The chapeau is a John-Fredrics creation

Bun Warmer

An aluminum bun warmer can be used for a fruit basket to center the table. This will give an interesting new touch. Fill the container to overflowing with fruits. You will not need the lid. This also makes a convenient basket in which to pass fruit at an informal party.

New Field for Women Opening In Occupational Therapy Jobs

Well paid jobs for thousands of women are available in occupational therapy, a field which sprang into prominence at the close of the last World War, when wounded soldiers had to be rehabilitated, it is reported by Miss Marjorie Fish, head of the division of occupational therapy at Columbia University.

Unlike the demand in other fields, the need for occupational therapists, who strengthen the disabled by assigning them suitable tasks, such as leatherworking, will increase after the present war, she points out.

Training for this uncrowded profession will be shortened and intensified at Columbia under two new programs combining academic and clinical studies, according to Miss Fish. "The field will probably continue to be almost monopolized by women, although an increaisng number of men are becoming interested," she says. "At present, out of more than 800 registered therapists in the Nation, only about 25 are men. The class of 21 at the university has only one male student.

"The great amount of work therapists do with disabled children, and the light tasks, such as bookbinding, in which they must be skilled in order to teach, probably account for the prevalence of women in the field. Further, the work has a definite emotional appeal which attracts women more strongly than men.

"The demand for occupational therapists is not merely a result of the Nation's war effort. A shortage of therapists existed before the beginning of the war and will undoubtedly exist afterward. One of the main tasks in the postwar period will be the physical rehabilitation of soldiers. Educational institutions will be called on to furnish a great many workers in this field."

Civil Service Jobs

YOU MAY find your job with the biggest employer of all—Uncle Sam! War has created thousands of U. S. Civil Service jobs, of many kinds!

What can you do? Typewrite? Take shorthand? Run an office machine? Have you had any experience at all as an inspector?

Inspectors are badly needed—for aviation materials, clothing, hats, engineering materials, textiles, supplies of all kinds.

If you have had no actual experience, college training or laboratory work is recognized.

Pay varies with experience—$1620 to $2600 a year. The age limit for many inspector jobs is 55, for some as high as 65.

The age limit is also high for office jobs, of which there are many. Junior typists and under addressograph operators (starting at 18 to 53) make $1260 a year. Junior stenographers (same age range) get $1440.

Perhaps your type of work would be of direct value in defense construction. An Engineering aid gets $1620 to $2000 a year, an instrument maker to $1.24 an hour.

For professional workers there are many good posts. Juniors may start at $2000 as soil scientist, meteorologist, metallurgist.

Even the untrained have a chance. See our 40-page booklet on U. S. Civil Service. Gives latest information on all kinds of jobs, with requirements, age range, pay—for men and women. Tells how to apply; gives job benefits.

How to Make an Old Costume Look New

Sorting out wardrobes to see what's what amounts to a national feminine pastime at this time of the year.

To help along, a suggestion, as charming as it's constructive, is passed on by Marjorie Woodworth, the beautiful young Hal Roach actress.

During her melee with near-forgotten costumes, Marjorie discovered a simple little navy crepe dress and a straw sailor in the same shade. Off came the red buttons on the dress, the pink flowers on the hat. Instead, a paper-white ruching of eyelet embroidered batiste went around the neckline and down the front of the dress; and, closely ruffled, around the brim of the perky little hat.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Brazenly Pursued by Wealthy, Unattractive Young Married Woman, Law Enforcement Officer Asks How To Avoid Scandalous Involvement; He Has a Wife

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please, if you can, help me with a personal problem. I am an officer of the law, married and father of a baby girl, and with the expectation of another child soon. Two weeks ago, a young and wealthy, but unattractive, married woman, mother of two babies, approached me and very frankly said that she was very much in love with me and that she wanted me and would get me if it took a year. Naturally, I was taken aback. For while I knew her name, having seen her with her husband, a prominent young politician, (who no doubt could cause me undue trouble), I did not know her.

To my knowledge, I have never given this young woman one ounce of reason for her peculiar behavoir. She follows me to every police detail that I have. She knows my schedule better than I do and she persists in being frank in her devotion to me. As I say, I have given her no reason to feel as she does. On the contrary, I have been blunt to the point of rudeness. But she is independently wealthy and says nothing will stand in the way of her "getting" me. By "getting," she means "get married." Perhaps if it were merely a passing flirtation, I could cope with that, and the trouble would end there.

I believe she is a young woman who hasn't enough to occupy her time and thinks this is an amusing way to spend it. It is anything but amusing to me. I am worried about the whole thing. Perhaps there is something to be done to protect myself, but I don't know what it is. Your help will be appreciated. Sincerely yours, J. C. W.

Report Case to Chief, For Sake of All

DEAR J. C. W.: If you are not suffering from hallucinations, then you are being pursued by a woman who is mentally unbalanced. For purposes of discussion, let's assume that the woman is behaving exactly as described. In order to protect yourself against scandalous involvement,—and, also, as a disinterested service to the woman and her family,—you should bring the situation to the attention of Chief of Police Edward J. Kelly, at once.

Since receiving your letter, I have talked with Major Kelly, who authorizes me to say that he personally will (1) give your story a friendly, sympathetic and strictly confidential hearing and (2) take over responsibility for curbing the woman's willfully disorderly or perhaps irrational behavior. In other words, he will outline the course of action to be followed, in disciplining her with sensible firmness. He joins me in urging you to get the facts before him at the earliest possible date.

Were it not for the fact that your wife is expecting a child, soon to be delivered, I should consider it sound foresight and good marriage policy to give her an unvarnished, play-by-play account of the matter, too,—just so that she would know "what the score is," in the event this flighty female should attempt, by trickery, to undermine her faith in your character. If she is a woman of great common sense and healthy poise, it might be well to confide in her, even so,—as a means of establishing an "united front" against the other woman's impudent aggression.

In brazenly coquetting with you, I dare say the latter is counting on burdening you with a "guilty secret," that you may worriedly feel you cannot share with your wife,—as one way of starting a rift between you. And almost without exception, any withholding of full trustful confidence between marriage partners takes heavy toll of psychic solidarity. However, if your wife inclines to be nervous, fretful and apprehensive at present,—or if she tends to jealousy,—it may be best for both to spare her knowledge of this contretemps, while relying upon your chief for advocacy and guidance in squelching the "threat." M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Preparation Hides Facial Blemishes

Don't be annoyed if you have a blemish that seems to loom in your estimation as plainly as a full moon. Such blemishes might be an unwelcome mole, dark-circled eyes and the brown splotch just below the eyebrow.

These need not be regarded as major beauty catastrophes, for there is a "Covermark" preparation heavy enough to conceal effectively such blemishes. You spread the cream on the place you want to suppress and lightly feather it outward with the fingertips. Then press a bit of powder on top of the cream and the spot is eclipsed to the eye—if not to nature.

Movie Actress Advises on Proper Use of Lipstick

In connection with this matter of making lipstick stay on, Anne Baxter, movie actress, advises you to choose lip rouge whose quality as well as color fits you. If your lips are dry, use a heavier color possibly applied over a little cold cream. If the day is warm, your skin oily, avoid a greasy lipstick or it will cake, slide off.

Only hard and fast rule in choosing and applying lipstick is to be true to yourself. Your lip lines should be you, in colors right for you and your wardrobe, applied with a rouge designed for your particular type of skin.

Anne has other ideas about lipstick and its application. She uses only natural colors, says they blend with practically any color in the average wardrobe with the possible exception of really difficult purple-reds. Even with these Anne thinks you can overdo the matching lipstick, making yourself look slightly ill instead of a beauty.

Natural make-up is particularly important this spring when giddy colors in giddy combinations are being worn. One print may be three different shades of red and blue, and lipstick must blend with them all. That means natural color, and not too much of it.

Enriched Bread Not Fattening; Its Vitamins Liberate Energy

By Ida Jean Kain

Enriching bread does not make it fattening. But that happens to be the latest bit of dietary nonsense, and the reason some women do not buy bread which has been fortified with vitamins and minerals.

As a matter of fact, the plain white bread which contains no Vitamin B may be the more fattening. Vitamin B1, called thiamin, is the spark which liberates energy to its full extent. In other words, thiamin is needed to turn into energy the calories you get from bread. If your diet furnishes too little of the thiamin required to be effectively liberate these carbohydrate calories, they are apt to be deposited as fat.

You cannot take it for granted that all white bread is now being enriched—or even take your grocer's word for it. Read your labels.

Label Reading

Housewives have the widespread reputation of never reading the labels to find out what they are buying. One progressive bread company which was one of the first to enrich the loaves and rolls found out that housewives did not bother to ask for the improved variety and quit making it. The asumption is that housewives will not notice the difference.

What some of the labels say would surprise you. One I read recently stated in boxcar letters that it was "enriched" bread, and then in small scropt, "with butter." That girls, would be more fattening! Still another bakery, convinced that something new had to be added to the label, put simply, "Buy defense bonds"—a fine idea, but no addition to the bread.

The word "enriched" should be followed by a statement as to what the enriching factors are. These should be Vitamin B1, niacin (also called nicotinic acid), and iron.

You should also specify that any flour you buy be the enriched kind. Then your biscuits and cakes will furnish their share of the important nutrients.

Demand vs. Supply

Unless you buy the enriched bread, flour and cereals, the storekeepers will not stock them and the manufacturers will not continue to offer them. By failing to demand what you want, you lose out.

But if every homemaker began today to insist on either the 100 per cent whole grain or the enriched brands, how long do you tinhk it owuld be before that kind and that kind only were on the market? My guess is about 24 hours—just about the time it would take the delivery trucks to cart back the rejections!

You homemakers do not know your own strength. You are the ones who will have to put across Uncle Sam's nutrition program for a healthier nation.

Size '40' Scores

"Best-Dressed Woman" at a big Palm Beach benefit recently was a size 40 who had blown out 50 candles on her birthday cake. She won on her smart appearance with white hair, black lace, and a single ornament—a cluster of natural-sized grape hyacinths in round and baguette-cut diamonds.

Unveiling of Tregor's Bust of Gen. MacArthur Draws Distinguished Crowd to Mayflower

THERE NEVER WAS an event like it. Not in Washington, anyway. And yet it could happen only in a wartime city that today rightly hails Gen. Douglas MacArthur as the hero of free peoples throughout the world.

This is the story. But before I go any further I'll have to confess that the event itself was the slickest publicity stunt I have ever seen in this Capital of confusion. Publicity for whom? Why the sculptor, of course; and the New York jeweler who, as sponsor, is sure to get his name mentioned today in scores of newspapers throughout the country.

Now to get down to brass tacks. Whoever planned that gala unveiling of Nison Tregor's bust of General MacArthur, and the party that preceded and followed it should have some kind of medal. I frankly admit I don't know who was responsible, because so many people took credit for it. Seemed that every time I turned around somebody gumshoed in my direction and finally got around to telling me that "You know, I was the first one who persuaded Nicky to let his marvelous bust of MacArthur be unveiled on Army Day." The only person I really suspected of having handled the arrangements—and incidentally, she did a swell job—didn't admit it at all. "Oh, no," she said. "I was just interested because I do think Nicky did a marvelous piece of work."

Right here I'd like to say—so do I. If I'm any judge of sculpture that bust is worthy of any attention that can be whipped up in its behalf. And the party itself—well, it certainly had everything. I haven't seen so much gold braid at any event since the bombs burst over Pearl Harbor. Even Provost Marshal General Allen Gullion, who has forsworn cocktail parties until after the war, was there full force. Field Marshal Sir John Dill, arriving with Col. Rez Benson, came early and stayed late; and diplomats were a dime a dozen all over the place.

THE PROGRAM itself, specifically arranged for the radio and the flock of newsreel cameramen, who had a ringside view of the whole thing, was—well I don't want to slush over—but it was as near perfect as anything I've seen around these parts in years. With a few well-chosen words, Paul V. McNutt started off; and in a lengthy experience of listening approvingly to his many speeches, I've never noted him to be in better form. The Army Day message from Brig. Gen. Albert Lyman Cox, and the Philippine message from Resident Commissioner J. M. Elizalde ("you call him the hero of the world; we still call him MacArthur of Bataan") were cut to order for the occasion, and superb, simply superb.

Dr. Herbert Vere Evatt, bringing the Australian message, was equally eloquent, and I saw tears in more than one pair of eyes when he came across with this "MacArthur has a monument more lasting than bronze; he is the saviour of all free people in the Pacific." I was touched, too, by Dr. Evatt's reference to the fact that MacArthur's birthday falls on Australia's national holiday.

There was a brief speech by William Howard Hoeffer, who commissioned Tregor to do the bust for West Point, and there was a fitting acceptance by Maj. Gen. William Connor, speaking in behalf of the United States Military Academy. As distinguished a crowd of diplomats as I've seen in one group this season stood on the platform to pay their respects while Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, sister-in-law of Man of the Hour Gen. MacArthur, assisted by Mrs. McNutt, lifted the piece of cheesecloth covering the bust.

There were "Ohs" and "Ahs" the length and breadth of the spacious Sapphire Room at that point. Since advance publicity pictures indicated that the bust was finished without a hat, many of those present were astonished to discover that a hat had been added. It had—to be exact—since 4 p. m. on Sunday when a few of Tregor's friends persuaded him that a general must look like a general, and that no general really did without his hat. Having executed the sculpture by reference to photographs entirely, Tregor finally decided to top it off with a general's cap; and I must say the effect left nothing to be desired.

THERE WAS prolonged applause as the bust was unveiled. Miss Meredith Howard, who had introduced the speakers, closed the program with equal grace . . . and the flock of distinguished diplomats, Army and Navy officials, and residential Washingtonians who had assembled for the unveiling went back to enjoying the party that followed.

There was a lavishly laden tea table in the center of the room. There was a bar at one end of the room. "Why I can't even get my handkerchief out of my pocket," said one guest as he made his way through the throng. Only 300 invitations were issued, and a card of admission was inclosed. There was strict checking at the door; and yet, goodness knows how, almost 700 people were on hand for the party. In keeping with the Washington custom, invited guests brought friends, and friends brought still others; and before anybody knew it, you couldn't stir that crowd with a stick.

Somewhere between the tea table and the rostrum on which stood the splendid sculpture, I got the real story of the party, the unveiling, and everything else. Seems that Tregor, the Russian-Polish artist, who is now an American citizen, spent a number of years in Chicago, won wide acclaim out in those parts in the early days of the New Deal when he came to Washington and did the bust of almost every important man in the city. Before that, his work had attracted international attention—his bust of Paderewski is still considered one of the best sculptures ever executed of the famous pianist who was once Poland's president. But it was his headline head-hunting in New Deal Washington that won him particularly high regard in Chicago

Nancy Kengla Is Bride of E. H. Jones

In an Easter Monday ceremony at St. Paul's Catholic Church, Miss Nancy Duvall Kengla, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Kengla, became the bride of Edward Hamlin Jones 2d, son of Mrs. DeWitt Jones, of Des Moines, Iowa.

Easter lillies, white roses and ferns formed the background as the Rev. Edmond Fontaine read the vows at 10 o'clock in the morning. Mr. Kengla gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride's gown of white satin featured a sweetheart neckline and calla lily sleeves. Buttoning down the back, the gown fell into a long, full train from a fitted waistband. A tiara of seed pearls held her full-length tulle veil, and she carried a bridal bouquet of white roses, gardenias and snapdragons.

Betty Lou Jones Is Maid of Honor

White crepe with a coral jacket on long-torso lines gowned the maid of honor, Miss Betty Lou Jones. Turquoise trimmed the sleeves of her jacket, and she carried a bouquet of talisman roses and coral snapdragons.

Gowned identically as the maid of honor were the bridesmaids. Miss Helen Marie Watson, of Washington, and Miss Eileen C. O'Connor, of Forest Hills, Long Island. Their flowers were talisman roses and snapdragons also.

The bridegroom's brother, DeWitt Jones, of Des Moines, was best man, and John Sproatt, of Iowa City, and Vernon C. Kohlhaas, of Washington, ushered. Mrs. Kengla, the bride's mother, was attired in turquoise gown with silver nail-studded belt. Her hat was black straw, veiled. The mother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Jones, wore chalk blue with a navy cartwheel hat and orchid corsage.

Wedding Breakfast After Ceremony

A wedding breakfast served at the Roosevelt Hotel followed the ceremony, and later, when the couple started on their wedding trip South, Mrs. Jones was costumed in a beige suit, dressmaker style. She wore a large purple hat and purple blouse. Her corsage was orchids. When Mr. and Mrs. Jones return they will live at Townley Courts, in Washington.

The bride is the granddaughter of Robert L. Kengla. Her great-uncle was Supreme Court Justice Gabriel Duvall. She received her A. B. degree from Trinity College here and her J. D. degree from George Washington University School of Law. Mr. Jones is a senior law student at George Washington University, having been graduated from the University of Iowa.

Mrs. Dyer, whose husband has just returned from a tour of foreign duty, poses with the family pet cocker spaniel, Robyn, who seems a bit sad about it all

Capital Girl Is Wed to Frank O'Neil

A quiet ceremony if wide interest here was performed at noon yesterday at St. Ann's rectory, when Miss Molly Stonestreet became the bride of Frank O'Neil.

Only a few intimate friends and relatives were present to hear the Rev. Russell A. Phelan read the vows and to gather afterward for a small wedding breakfast ta the Oakland Apartments, where the bride's mother, Mrs. Esther Whiting Stonestreet, lives.

The bride was given in marriage by her grandfataher, Alvord Cedarwald, of Georgetown. She was attired in a pastel blue wool suit, and her brown hat trimmed with tan feathers was matched by her brown alligator shoes and bag. Her flowers were yellow orchids.

As maid of honor, Miss Ann Swanson was costumed in soft dusty rose wool and wore a corsage of whitte orchids. George DeWitt was best man. The couple left by motor for Williamsburg, Va., and Sea Island, Ga. After a two weeks' trip they will make their home at 3921 Fulton Street, in Washington.

Mrs. O'Neil attended Madeira School and made her debut in December, 1939. Her husband, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. O'Neil, is associated with Phillips and Canby, real estate firm.

Isabelle Meuser Is Married

The wedding of Miss Isabelle Meuser to Edwin Morrow O'Brien, which took place yesterday at Christ Episcopal Church in Joliet, Ill., is of interest to Washington. A reception at 706 North Raynor Avenue followed the wedding.

The bride is well known here, where she and her sister, the former Miss Marjorie Meuser, now Mrs. J. William Wagner, made their debuts under the aegis of their cousin, Arthur Bradley Campbell.

Mr. Campbell, however, did not go to Illinois for the wedding as he is still in Palm Beach, Fla. He expects to return to New York April 18 and will visit Washington later.

The bridegroom also has a number of friends in Washington as he has visited here a number of times while he was a student at the University of Virginia.

Padilla Honored Again; Will Leave Tomorrow

After a quiet Easter weekend—that way at his own request—the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Mexico, Dr. Ezequiel Padilla, yesterday again assumed the role of guest of honor, which he has played almost daily since his arrival in the Capital.

The fete was a luncheon given for him by the Governing Board of the Pan American Union yesterday, and also invited were the members of his mission, the Undersecretary of Finance of Mexico, Ramon Beteta, who will remain in Washington and will open an office here; the Economic Adviser of the Bank of Mexico, Luciano Wiechers, and the Secretary to the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mario Romero Romero Lopetegui.

Members of the governing board include the Acting Secretary of State, Sumner Welles; the Ambassador of Peru, Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Ambassador of Mexico, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera; the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Ambassador of Brazil, Dr. Carlos Martins; the Ambassador of Venezuela and acting chairman of the Governing Board, Dr. Diogenes Escalante; the Ambassador of Colombia, Dr. Gabriel Turbay; the Ambassador of Chile, Rodolfo Michels; the Ambassador of Cuba, Dr. Aurelio F. Concheso; the Ambassador of Uruguay, Dr. Juan Carlos Blanco; the Ambassador of Panama, Ernesto Jaen Guardia; the Ambassador of Bolivia; Dr. Luis Fernanco Guachalla, and the Ambassador of Paraguay, Dr. Celso E. Velazquez.

Also, the Minister of Guatemala, Dr. Adrian Recinos; the Minister of El Salvador; Dr. Hector David Castro; the Minister of Nicaragua, Dr. Leon DeBayle; the Minister of Honduras, Dr. Julian R. Caceres; the Minister of Costa Rica, Dr. Luis Fernandez; the Minister of Haiti, M. Fernand Dennis, and the Minister of the Dominican Republic, Dr. J. M. Troncoso.

Other guests were the Minister-Counselor of the Mexican Embassy, Dr. Luis Quintanilla; the Director General of the Pan American Union, Dr. L. S. Rowe; the Assistant Director, Dr. Pedro de Alba, and the Counselor of the Unior, Dr. William Manger.

Tomorrow Dr. Padilla will leave for New York, where he will again be an honor guest at a "good neighbor" dinner.

The Brewsters Give Dinner for Mrs. J. L. Loose

Because they are a flower of which the guest of honor is particularly fond, pink "Supreme" roses centered the table last night when Senator and Mrs. Ralph Brewster entertained at dinner for Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose at the Sulgrave Club.

Dozens and dozens of them filled a low silver bowl, which reflected the light of tall white tapers in silver candelabra. Covers were laid for 14.

Mrs. Loose plans to return some time this week to her home in Kansas City, after a round of feting which has kept her quite in demand during her stay here. She may well be a bit anxious to get out of the hurly-burly of Washington, for Kansas City is about even with Washington, when it comes to springtime, and the park across from her apartment should be at its most beautiful just now. The park, incidentally, she bought and gave to Kansas City, a town famous for its park system, and it now bears the name of her late husband.

Children's Party At White House

At the first "official" White House party since December 7, Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at the White House yesterday afternoon for some 15 youngsters whose ages ranged between 4 and 12.

The party, which has been an annual event on Easter Monday, while the Capital's children rolled eggs on the White House lawn went on the boards as scheduled, though the egg rolling was canceled.

The one difference was, that while the parties usually have been in honor of little Diana Hopkins, daughter of Harry Hopkins, yesterday's event had no guest of honor, though Diana was among the guests. Also among the guests was Mrs. Roosevelt's niece, Janet Roosevelt.

Another niece at the White House yesterday was Amy Roosevent, older sister of Janet. Amy, daughter of Mrs. Dorothy Kemp Roosevelt, of Birmingham, Mich., was one of a group of students of the Baldwin High School of Birmingham, Mich., who were received by Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday. Mrs. Dorothy Kemp Roosevelt and her third daughter, Diana, were also at the White House yesterday.

True Story: Finds House In an Hour

Mrs. Florence Brown will leave today for New York, where she will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dean, of Douglaston, Long Island. She also plans to spend several days at the Park Avenue home of Ernestine Evans, the magazine writer.

Mrs. Brown set somewhat of a record when she came here from Caronado, Calif., last month. In less than an hour, in fact in only the time it took her to get a taxi at Union Station and look up a woman a friend had recommended her to see, she had found herself a house in Alexandria.

She was accompanied here by the former Miss Frances Geraldine Boyer, who became the bride of Ensign Garrison Brown, son of Mrs. Brown, last Saturday, in Annapolis, in one of the first weddings since the lifting of the two-year marriage ban on Naval Academy ensigns.

Living in Washington is not exactly new to Mrs. Brown. As the widow of Commander Melville Stewart Brown, she remembers being stationed here six different times. In Coronado she was a full fledged editor of one of the town's two papers.

Mme. Ciechanowska Joins Committee Of Music Group

Mme. Cieschanowska, wife of the Polish Ambassador, has joined the Washington committee for the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Mrs. Adolph Caspar Miller, chairman of the Washington Committee, made this announcement after her group had completed plans for the orchestra's final concert of the season in Constitution Hall on Wednesday evening, April 15.

Mme. Ciechanowska has made a notable place for herself in the Diplomatic Corps in a comparatively brief tour of duty. She has been active in many war relief projects and musical events in this city. The English-born chateleine of the Polish Embassy made news on the occasion of an earlier Philadelphia Orchestra visit which occurred on the night of the District's first all-out blackout. Basing her plans on her experiences in England—among which was the bombing of her London home—Mme. Ciechanowska gave a reception for Polish pianist Artur Rubenstein behind Embassy doors air-raid wardens thought closed for the night. She wanted to show that normal night life can go on with proper preparations.

With the appointment of Mme. Ciechanowska to the committee, Mrs. Miller also revealed that Mrs. Stanley Woodward has become vice chairman of the group.

Midshipmen Feted At Recent Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard J. Gallagher entertained at dinner Saturday evening in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel in honor of Mrs. Gallagher's brother, Midshipman Shackelford Moore, who was in town from Annapolis for the weekend.

Mrs. J. C. Holmes Will Leave Thursday

After a round of gay and very informal parties in her honor, Mrs. John Christian Holmes will leave Thursday to spend two weeks in Bastrop, La., with her mother, Mrs. Robert Lee Credille.

She plans to visit for about 10 days in Chicago and then will join Mr. Holmes in Philadelphia, where he has been transferred with the Securities Exchange Commission

Mrs. Bruce Smith Entertains at Luncheon

Mrs. Bruce Smith gave a luncheon yesterday for a small company of guests complimenting Mrs. John Allan Dougherty.

Mrs. Dougherty, who is living at the Sulgrave Club, expects to leave soon for her place, Little Cedars, at Westport, Conn., where she will remain until autumn.

and New York. And it was one of his friends, Laurence Ely, formerly of Chicago and now of New York, who suggested to him, a few months ago, that he get for a sponsor William Howard Hoeffer.

WHO IS HOEFFER? Well, that's what at least 500 guests at yesterday's party—which he gave, incidentally—were asking. Invitations had not gone out in anybody's name, which is a bit unusual; but anyway, party-going Washingtonians rarely bother about who is host. And when there's a tie-up with such a glorious hero as Gen. MacArthur is—well, there's hardly anybody around these parts whom you could have kept away from yesterday's event, no matter how hard you tried, on any account whatsoever.

I can't go into details about who was there. Not enough space. But everyone of the Allied Nations was represented in the throng. Mrs. Richard Sutherland, whose husband is with MacArthur, was there, doing full duty as chairman of the hostesses. Among those I saw taking their turns at the teapot or coffee urn were Representative Katherine Byron, Mrs. Delos Emmons, Mme. Kwapiszekska, Mrs. Bowman MacArthur, Mrs. Albert Lyman Cox, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. Conger Pratt, Baroness Stackelberg, Miss Meredith Howard, Mrs. Martin Vogel and Mrs. Henry Arnold.

From first to last, the event was a howling success. Few persons among those present cared who was giving the party; or what the reason back of it might be. It was Washington's way of paying tribute to a courageous general, upon whom the hope of free peoples everywhere now rests; and considering that, who am I to have the effrontery to mention there was a slight commercial tinge to the whole thing?

Bagpipe Music At Opening of Scottish Week

Those strains of bagpipe music which emanated from British War Relief Headquarters yesterday signified the opening of Scottish Week there.

As the sale and exhibit, which is sponsored by the Scottish Clans Evacuation Plan, goes into its second day today.. Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt's name is listed among the distinguished visitors expected. She plans to drop by about the middle of the afternoon.

Proceeds from this affair also will go for the cause of evacuating children to the Scottish highlands from bombed areas, and tickets are now on sale. The time set for the recital is 9 o'clock Sunday night.

Hostesses this morning at the headquarters will be Mrs. Robert Dunlap, Mrs. Newlands Johnson and Mrs. Jane Guthrie Beckley, who has come here recently from Paris to live.

No Silk for Civilians During Emergency, Dr. Pratt Tells Republican Women

AWAY WITH illusions! It is useless to harbor a secret hope that perhaps by some miracle you still can have silk stockings or a mite of silk in your party frock. Not one ounce of silk will the civilian population buy until after the emergency. This is the opinion of Dr. E. E. Pratt, chief of the training section of the War Production Board, who spoke before the D. C. League of Republican Women's meeting yesterday afternoon.

"If shipping conditions get worse," said Dr. Pratt., "by 1943 there will be barely enough wool to clothe the Army and Navy. Wool for civilians now seems unlikely, but much depends upon whether we can continue to import in quantities."

Mrs. Dolly C. Gann

Mrs. Charles L. McNary

These are not the only shortages that confront the people of the United States. For example, Dr. Pratt quoted statistics on copper, tin, rubber, aluminum, manganese and other vital materials needed to carry on the war. In citing these he pointed to immediate or possible shortages.

"Contrary to popular opinion," said the speaker, "priorities have not ruined the small businessman, rather they have saved him whenever or wherever he could be saved."

He explained that shortages of certain materials and products created the priorities and that priorities did not create the shortages as is commonly believed.

Mrs. Robert A. Taft

Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster

Pointing out that after the attack on Pearl Harbor the war became one of economics, rather than military, Dr. Pratt said: "The whole war effort is going to cause radical dislocations of all civilian activities. Not yet, has the civilian population realized the extent of the hardships and sacrifices that it is going to face."

At the conclusion of the speaker's talk, the league held its annual election of officers. Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann was reelected president without opposition. Mrs. Virginia White Speel was named honorary president for life.

Others elected for the ensuing year are Mrs. Charles L. McNary, first vice president; Mrs. Robert A. Taft, second vice president; Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, third vice president; Mrs. Warren J. Haines, fourth vice president; Mrs. William R. Castle, fifth vice president; Mrs. Henry Albers, sixth vice president; Mrs. Harry B. Couter, recording secretary; Mrs. Joseph McGarraghy, assistant recording secretary; Miss Grace C. Burton, treasurer; Mrs. Francis E. Pope, assistant treasurer; Mrs. William H. Scott, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Edgar E. Quale, assistant corresponding secretary.

Mrs. Gilbert H. Grovensor

Miss Temple Bailey

Those named to serve on the board of directors include Miss Temple Bailey, Miss Ruth Brown, Mrs. Gilbert H. Grosvenor, Miss Catherine Newton, Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, Mrs. Franz H. Ridgeway, Mrs. Frank B. Stelle, Mrs. Matthew J. Whittall, Mrs. Jerome J. Wilbur and Mrs. D. E. Yarnell.

Miss Bunker Sets Wedding Date

Miss Eleanor Lemly Bunker, daughter of Capt. Charles Waite Orville Bunker, U. S. N., and Mrs. Bunker, has selected April 18 as the date for her marriage to Otis Theodore Wingo, jr., son of Mrs. Otis Theodore Wingo and the late Representative Wingo, of Fort Smith, Ark., and Washington.

The wedding will be held at 4 o'clock in the Great Choir of the Cathedral with Bishop James E. Freeman officiating.

The bride-elect is living at present with her parents in Edgemoor, Md., while her father is on duty as commanding officer of the Naval Medical School. She attended L'Ecole Vinent in Lausanne, Switzerland, the Madeira School and Vassar College.

Mr. Wingo attended Washington schools and was graduated from Princeton University in 1933.

Mrs. Moran Drury Fetes Visitors From New York

One of the largest luncheons of the season accented the calendar yesterday when Mrs. Moran Drury entertained more than 80 guests at the Shoreham Hotel. The fete was arranged in honor of Mrs. Dorothy Green, who is visiting Mme. Gustaw Orlicz-Dreszer, and Mrs. Walter Robinson, who accompanied Mrs. Green here from New York a few days ago.

In keeping with the Easter season, lilies decorated the long U-shaped table at which covers were laid in the Louis Seize Room. Receiving informally in the lobby of the hotel, the hostess was smartly turned out in a straight-line black frock, set off with a gypsy-type turban of red and green silk.

Mrs. Green, who has many friends in Washington, was greeting them on all sides at the luncheon. She was also bringing reports to a number of guests from her stepfather and mother, the former Rumanian Minister and Mme. Irimescu, who are now living in New York. Planning to remain on in Washington for a week at least, Mrs. Robinson may change her plans and stay even longer. A resident of Shanghai for many years, she returned to this country shortly after the beginning of the war and has been making her home in Beverley Hills, Calif. Her husband is a major in the British army and is now fighting in India.

Yesterday's luncheon was another gala accent for a continuous round of fetes that got under way shortly after Mrs. Green and Mrs. Robinson arrived last Thursday. Last evening, Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer entertained at a buffet supper for the visitors; and today Mme. Nowinska will give a small luncheon for them in her apartment at Dorchester House. This afternoon, they will be feted at a cocktail party to be given by Commander and Mrs. Charles Windsor.

Guests at yesterday's luncheon included Mme. U. S. Agencies Push Salvage of Paper

Budget Bureau Pushes Conservation Drive; Efficient Waste Collection Plan Sought

The Federal Government made a double effort yesterday to join the rest of the Nation in conserving paper.

The Budget Bureau announced that an appeal has been made to all departments to use as little paper as possible. At the same time Public Buildings Administration and Procurement Division representatives conferred on the possibility of eliminating or reducing the 30 per cent loss of salvagable waste paper from Federal buildings.

This 30 per cent loss is due to the inability of the small custodial staffs to sack all of the usable waste paper, a Public Buildings Administration spokesman said. Since the budgets do not permit enlarging the staffs, the Penn Paper and Stock Co., which has the contract to salvage the waste material, will be asked to pick up loose as well as packaged paper.

The loose paper includes all that is not collected in waste paper baskets. Some of it is the most valuable kind used—cuttings from the mimeographing and blue-printing rooms, wrapping paper and cartons from the mail rooms.

Another conference is scheduled for today. Robert O. Ball, manager of the Penn Paper Co., and Horace Walker, of the D. C. Salvage Committee, will meet with Public Buildings and Procurement Division officials to work out a more efficient way of paper collection and salvage.

In its paper economy order, the Budget Bureau directed all offices to review and cut down mailing lists and to eliminate all printing and processing of material not necessary to war efforts.

Reports demanded of departments does not necessarily mean that the reports must be published, Budget Director Harold Smith reminded heads of all executive departments, independent establishments and agencies. A provision in the nanual appropriation act authorizes the discontinuance of any annual and special reports in order to keep within the budget, he pointed out.

Smith also cited this comment by the House Appropriations Committee: "The committee feels that considerable savings could be made by a systematic and careful examination of the numerous statutory requirements for the printing of certain documents and reports now required by law. The Yearbook (of Agriculture) is a conspicuous example."

Each department head was instructed to file with the Budget Bureau within the next 30 days a report showing what printed matter will be curtailed and what eliminated, with an estimate of the annual savings in paper to be realized.

Smith's order followed a letter from the Congressional Joint Committee on Printing demanding that the Federal Government be at least as good an example to the country as are the thousands of school children who have been working at the collection of old newspapers and magazines for war production.

Spokesmen for many Government agencies stated last night that they had anticipated the order, and were already using less paper, and using that more carefully than before.

Rigid Controls Detect Many Export Frauds

By D. Harold Oliver
Associated Press Staff Writer

Widespread fraud in applications for export licenses to circumvent the policy of blacklisting foreign firms which do business with the Axis is being detected almost daily, Board of Economic Warfare officials said yesterday.

Some of the attempted frauds are clumsy and are caught immediately. For example, a drugstore in South America, evidently screening a Nazi firm, ordered 250 tons of steel I-beams. Another drug store applied for license for a big shipment of tinplate.

Officials of the board reported that the blacklist had been so effective in keeping American goods out of enemy hands that foreign concerns or individuals acting for enemy powers were now using dummy names or misusing the names of nonblacklisted firms in applying for American export licenses.

The Export Control Division, largest unit of the BEW, recently blocked a large shipment of quinine to Mexico. The application was filed in the name of the Mexican government and its validity was suspected because of the size of the order and the fact that Mexico had not been accustomed to buying quinine here.

A line of trucks loaded with small packages of drugs and chemicals for retail stores in Mexico was halted at the border when it was discovered no such stores had ordered the goods.

Many German and Italian orders for South American goods are blocked before the orders are received by the shippers. British mail censors take care of this in West Indies ports.

The United States to date has forbidden trade with 4494 firms and individuals in Latin America and 1894 in Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and Turkey because of suspected enemy ties.

With virtually every exportable item under rigid control, the export license division of BEW is now handling 8000 license applications daily. An average of three days is required to clear each one.

The applications have increased more than five-fold since January because of the requirement that each shipment be licensed. Before January exporters could get a general license covering all their shipments for a year.

So thorough is the control system that in some cases even licensed shipments are traced at the other end to make sure they do not leak into enemy territory. This is true of some exports to Spain.

Another control feature with respect to Spain is that the United States will not allow certain goods to go there in excess of Spain's known domestic needs of those goods. Licenses for such shipments are held up until Spain's supply of those things are about exhausted. In return, this country gets some strategic materials from Spain.

Avoid Catastrophe of Peace, Padilla Cautions Americas

By the Associated Press

The greatest hour of the Western Hemisphere will come when the United Nations achieve victory but "peace will be a catastrophe even more destructive than war itself" if the American nations do not use "organized foresight," Ezequiel Padilla, foreign minister of Mexico, declared yesterday.

"It will be the hour for the great mission the American continent has to achieve: that of exerting all of its powers to alleviate the moral and physical hunger of a world in disgrace," Padilla, one of the Western Hemisphere's greatest statesmen, told the governing board of the Pan American Union.

The board, composed of the diplomatic representatives of the 21 American republics, held a special session to honor Padilla, now visiting in Washington.

"Now, at this moment when death and destruction devastate the armies and crews of peoples brothers of ours, a positive cooperative and defensive action and the resolve to fight to the very end for the fate of our united countries must take the place of noble words," he said.

Padilla delivered a similar warning in a C. B. S. broadcast last night.

The Pan American Union board elected a rules committee, decided on proceedure and had placed before it all hemisphere defense resolutions passed by the Rio Conference.

These fall into three classifications—communications, subversive activities and economic defense. The convoy matter will be taken up under the first classification.

Elected to the rules committee were: Col. Oscar Moscosa, Bolivia; Brig. Gen. Amaro Soares Bittencourt, Brazil; Maj. Gen. Rturo Espinosa Mujica, Chile; Col. Cristobal Guzman Cardenas, Mexico; Col. Hugo Molins, Uruguay, and Col. Juan Jones-Parra, Venezuela.

Alternates elected were: Capt. Alberto D. Brunet, Argentina; Lieut. Col. Ernesto Buenaventura, Columbia; Lieut. Col. Felipe Munilla, Cuba; Col. Fidel Cristino Garay, El Salvador, and Vice Admiral Alfred W. Johnson, the United States.

District Begins '42 Inspection Of Automobiles

Washington's 1942 automobile inspection period affecting more than 146,000 car owners began yesterday. Notification of inspection dates will be mailed to every owner now registered.

Commenting on the inspection, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said more than 50 per cent of the passenger cars inspected last year were rejected at first examination at the two inspection stations. Of those rejected, Van Duzer said about 6000 failed to reappear for re-examination.

"We know that these cars are no longer on the streets in Washington," Van Duzer said. "They were apparently in such bad condition that the owners either junked them or moved to some less strict jurisdiction."

Van Duzer said also that about 61 per cent of taxicabs and commercial vehicles failed to pass the first inspection, but that in many instances only minor adjustments were required to pass the cars.

The total inspected last year was an increase of 14,955 over cars inspected in 1940, it was reported.

TO

INVESTORS IN RAILROAD AND OTHER SECURITIES

AND TO LIFE INSURANCE POLICYHOLDERS

IN one of the most far-reaching revaluations of our times the Federal Courts and the Interstate Commerce Commission will rule this year on questions vitally affecting $4,500,000,000 of bonds of railroads undergoing reorganization.

Foremost among them is the $650,000,000 Missouri Pacific System.

During the depression and the drought, like many farmers and home owners saved from eviction by a liberal government, Missouri Pacific defaulted on its bond interest. Unlike the farmer, however, the bondholder did not default, he was defaulted to. Yet there are some who would use this technicality of default to ruin hundreds of thousands of small bondholders even though their interest is now being earned by a wide margin.

This is precisely what has been attempted in the Missouri Pacific reorganization. And this in face of the fact that interest on the System's bonds is currently being earned by a wide margin.

A Dangerous Precedent

In these days when the first step so often precedes a more radical one, the needless expropriation of people of small means is not a pleasant thing to contemplate. That is why Alleghany Corporation seeks the support of all investors in its opposition to any such plan as the Stedman Plan of reorganization of Missouri Pacific. Although this plan has just been rejected by bondholders in the official Interstate Commerce Commission balloting its principles will remain a serious threat to the savings of the people as long as powerful interests, for reasons of their own, continue to press them before our Courts.

The Issue

The tax laws recognize that the hire of capital (interest), like the hire of labor, is a proper deduction from income before taxes. And yet the Stedman Plan would have forced the bondholder to accept stock in exchange for evidence of debt. Consequently, sums intended by Congress to be fully available to bondholders would have been subjected to the full impact of taxes by the Stedman Plan. Alleghany proposes that, instead of stock, bondholders be given income bonds on which interest will be paid when it is earned. Such interest will then be rightly and fully taxable, where it is intended to be, in the hands of the bondholder.

Congress Not to Blame

Section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act was passed in a period of great difficulty, to bring a constructive solution to the railroad problem. Yet many railroads are being reorganized with a ruthless disregard for the bondholder, a disregard which present tax laws make appallingly apparent. Vague promises have been held out of administrative or legislative relief to come, as though the Treasury Department or Congress were to blame.

No disclosure has been made that at best this relief can apply only to the excess profits tax. The normal tax of 24% and the surtax of 31% now proposed can be lifted from the reorganized Missouri Pacific only by the solution suggested by Alleghany.

To junior bondholders a 55% tax means practically 100% confiscation; to senior bondholders it means reduced coupons and the loss of a vital margin of coverage.

How You Can Help

The small investor is entitled to consideration in a Democracy as well as the laborer or the farmer. Particularly is this true when his savings are being sought for Defense stamps. You can help by urging your life insurance company to support, not impede, Alleghany in the plea it will make before the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Courts on your behalf—a plea to stop the encroachment upon the savings of the people contrary to the intent of Congress.

That leadership will not long survive that maintains itself upon the needless ruin of the many.

ROBERT R. YOUNG,
Chairman, Alleghany Corporation

Efficiency Rating System Is Protested

The new war agencies—Office of Emergency Management, War Production Board, Office of Price Administration and the many others—have protested against the efficiency rating system, which they consider to be time-consuming and complicated. They asked the Civil Service Commission for permission to use a "simplified" rating system but an official of the commisison said the request had been denied. It was explained at the commisison that the law requires the system to be "uniform" and the law would be broken if the war agencies were allowed to use a different method of rating employes. War officials will take their case to the commissioners themselves.

War officials have a good case but the commission has the law on its side. The war agencies are hiring a minimum of 1000 employes a week. Changes are made every day. Employes don't stay in one spot long and it's difficult for a supervisor to keep tab on the new employes and the work they are doing. War officials point out that the efficiency rating system was drawn up in peace time for use in established agencies. Many believe that until the war agencies are shaken down to the point where the newest employe knows in detail what his duties are the rating system will only lead to grievances between the employes and the supervisors.

However, many employes in old-line agencies are upset over the new rating system. Their fears are summed up best by a supervisor who told his employes the other day "that I couldn't conscientiously rate Saint Peter excellent if I understand this new system correctly." The supervisor had been giving excellent ratings to many of his employes in the past but this year they'll get lower ratings in most cases. Too many employes believe the stricter rating system is a slick device to beat them out of a pay raise under the Ramspeck-Mead automatic promotion act. To be eligible for a raise an employe must get a rating of very good or excellent, or good, if his salary is below the average of the grade. On the other hand, Congress gave the commission orders to get tough. And if the commission doesn't get tough Congress may knock out the automatic pay plan. Briefly, everyone has his troubles.

Stenographers Scarce

Civil Service Commission is cracking down on agencies that are using stenographers on clerical work. It can't supply the demands for stenos and it has ordered all departments to supply it with the names of all stenos who are spending 50 per cent or more of their time on clerical work. The commission probably will take the clerk-stenographers and place them in jobs where they will be stenographers 100 per cent of the time.

Employment Service, however, reports there is a supply of stenos available to meet immediate needs. It has 27,300 stenos on its rolls available for work. Tests showed 24,000 to be qualified. Also 250 stenotype operators. Half of the available stenos are in five States—Texas, California, New York, Illinois and Pennsylvania. Only 290 were found in this area. Civil Service expects to hire 10,000 stenos by July . . . On March 1 the Civil Service Commission reports there were 233,403 Federal employes here in the executive branch, an increase of 9920 during February. In the entire service there are now an estimated 275,000 employes on Uncle Sam's pay roll here.

20,000 See Fighter Planes at Airport; Bond Sales Boosted

The American soldier today is "a whale of a lot better than his brother of 1918" and the United States is "stronger than ever," Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, commander of the Army's supply services, said last night in an Army Day address.

"But our team is weaker; too many members have been knocked out," he warned members and guests of the District Chapter, Military Order of the World War, observing the twenty-fifth anniversary of this country's entrance in World War I with a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel.

Gen. Somervell coupled his analogy of America's situation now and in 1918 with a plea for every American to contribute his best in the war effort.

A Job for Every Person

"There's a job for every last one of us to do," he asserted. "If all of us, all Americans everywhere, do that job well, the way it deserves to be done, the way we know how to do it, we'll shorten the conflict and secure victory."

The need for preparedness in peace as well as war was stressed by Gen. Somervell and other speakers at the banquet, the District's chief Army Day function.

"Our duty after the war," declared Maj. Ennals Waggaman, commander-in-chief of the Military Order of the World War, "is not to forget that safety rests with those who have armed support and defense."

Typical Soldier Is Guest

Sergt. Carl E. Plitt, jr., of Chevy Chase, Md., the Army's "typical" citizen-soldier, was guest of honor. Presented by Maj. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, Army deputy chief of staff, as a soldier who "expresses our common feeling that democracy is something worth fighting for," Plitt expressed his thanks "for the honor of representing the thousands of selectees in the camps today."

Other guests included Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet and chief of naval operations; Vice Admiral Russel R. Waesche, commander of the United States Coast Guard; Maj. Gen. Alexander D. Surles, chief of the War Department Public Relations Bureau, and Constantin Fotitch, the Yugoslavian minister to Washington.

Stars of the Broadway musical, "Porgy and Bess," provided entertainment for the affair. Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox was toastmaster.

Army Day found the Nation's Capital flying Stars and Stripes most everywhere the eye looked in the downtown sections, and many residences displayed the colors, too, in tribute to the Army.

Twenty thousand persons visited the National Airport for the second day's exhibition of 11 Army bombers and fighter planes.

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Robert H. Hinckley, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, for Air inspected the fighting craft at the Airport. The Air Force Band from Bolling Field serenaded the spectators at the airport from 2 to 3 p. m.

The day took a flair of music when the United States Army Band serenaded more than 1000 persons from the Treasury steps in the interest of defense bonds sales.

The speaker was Maj. Gordon Hittenmark, U. S. A.; the honor guest was Movie Star Carole Landis. Maj. Hittenmark, in a one-minute address, recalled the World War when as a Boy Scout in Washington he aided in the sales of liberty bonds. Yesterday he urged the crowd as individuals to ask themselves a question when looking in the mirror every day:

"What am I doing to help win this war?" Don't stop doing your part," he urged. "Those boys over there with Gen. MacArthur aren't stopping."

Miss Landis led the audience in a rendition of "God Bless America."

Open house programs were held yesterday at the Army Medical Center here, at Fort Belvoir, Fort Meade and the Aberdeen Proving Ground.

Defense Keynotes Bethesda's Army Day Parade of 1000

FIRST-AID WOMEN of the Chevy Chase Auxiliary Corps rest their tired feet after marching last night in the Bethesda Army Day parade: Charlotte Brown, Louise Cappelen, Mrs. Edward Halloway and Nancy Reutlinger

More than 1000 members of various civilian defense and Red Cross units in Montgomery County, Md., observed Army day in Bethesda last night with a parade that featured intermittent explosions of incendiary bombs in special containers atop moving motor carriers.

Adding further color to the parade, which drew several thousand spectators, were 380 auxiliary civilian defense firemen from the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area, carrying shovels, pails, brooms, rakes, hand pumps and portable fire fighting equipment.

The parade began at 8:15 p. m. at Bradley Lane and Wisconsin Avenue and proceeded along Wisconsin Avenue to Georgetown Road to the Bethesda Fire Department station on the Georgetown Road, where the reviewing stand was set up.

Mrs. W. H. Blair, of Bethesda, was the only woman marcher in the ranks of the auxiliary firemen.

Among other organizations participating were the Montgomery County Conservation and Salvage unit, various units of the Bethesda Chapter and Montgomery County Red Cross, Metropolitan Police Boys' Band, Elks Boys' Band of the District of Columbia and Leland Junior High School Band of Chevy Chase.

In charge was Chief Joseph A. Bargagni, of the Bethesda Volunteer Fire Department.

Trade Board Backs Police Accident Unit

Report Condemning It Made to Please D. C. Commissioners, Members Are Told

The Board of Trade's traffic committee unanimously reaffirmed its indorsement of the Police Accident Investigation Unit yesterday at a special luncheon meeting.

"We are definitely and vigorously opposed to abolition or weakening of the Accident Investigation Unit," said the resolution introduced by Joseph D. Ashby, chairman of a subcommittee which studied the report of the police investigation of the unit.

"The unit should proceed along lines as now organized, but should be enlarged and strengthened. Any movement to do away with it is recognized as a definite step backward in the intelligent handling of traffic."

Records Read

Minutes were read of a meeting of the committee held on August 4, 1941, when the committee first heard intimations of a possible discontinuance of the Accident Investigation Unit. Not only did the record show the traffic committee's approval of the unit at that time, but also showed that Inspector Milton Smith, one of the three police officers who investigated the unit for the Commissioners, spoke againsst its abolition.

"Since Commissioner Young let it be known in advance that he wished to do away with the accident unit, the three officers who were assigned to study it had no choice in what their findings would be—after all they are practical men," John Victory told the committee.

"Because it was written by men who, humanly enough, would want ot please the boss, the report is not worth the paper it's written on," Victory continued.

War Influence Cited

Jerome Fancuilli read a letter from Joseph Eastman, defense transportation chief, which stated that intensified accident investigation is necessary to keep to a minimum man hours lost in war production because of traffic accidents.

Fancuilli also presented a resolution advocating that Federal employes who are granted free parking space in Government lots be required to bring other persons to work with them in exchange for the parking privilege. Although there was some question of how such a ruling could be implemented, the resolution was passed unanimously.

A resolution was introduced by George Keneipp, chairman of a budget subcommittee, approving the Commissioners' estimates for Department of Vehicles and Traffic, but requesting that reclassification of the employes be more frequent, as an incentive to better work.

Today Deadline For 'Off Duty' Signs on Cabs

Beginning today cab drivers must display "On Call" or "Off Duty" signs when they do not wish to pick up passengers, Public Utilities Commission Chairman Gregory Hankin announced last night.

The signs were supposed to have been installed on the first of the month, but due to the inability of many drivers to obtain them, the PUC postponed the deadline.

All drivers for companies signed up for the pick-up service must begin today to display pick-up signs, and one of the 24 directional signs established for this service.

Violation of the sign-posting regulation carries a $200 fine and loss of his hacker's license.

Loose Money Draws Criminals To Capital, McCarran Asserts

SENATOR GETS POLICEMAN'S VIEW—Senator Pat McCarran (left), Commissioner John Russell Young and Chief of Police Edward Kelly shown last night at Fourth and E Streets Southwest, where they arrived immediately after a gun battle between a Washington policeman and a Negro. McCarran was making his first visit to police headquarters when the alarm was sounded

Criminal characters are attracted to Washington because the city is filled with "loose money," Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, and chairman of the Senate District Committee, said last night in a talk to regular and auxiliary police detectives at a headquarters line-up.

McCarran described Washington as the "honey pot of the world, and stated that "more money is turned loose in the City of Washington than in any place in the world."

The veteran legislator was making his first tour of police headquarters accompanied by Maj. Edward J. Kelly, police superintendent, and Commissioner John Russell Young.

McCarran, Young, and Kelly congratulated the detectives on their work during the last six months, but warned against overconfidence.

"Don't fool yourselves into thinking that those waves of crime won't come again," McCarran stated.

McCarran's expressed desire "to see the underworld . . . where need and adversity give rise to lawlessness" was fulfilled when prostitutes, petty thieves and criminals paraded on to the line-up stage to answer questions and give detectives a chance to identify them with crimes other than those for which they were arrested.

Afterwards, McCarran told reporters: "I was very agreeably impressed with the type and character of men as indicated by their appearance, promptness and alertness. I think they will compare more than favorably with any police force in the country."

Make-Believe Raid Shows Why Rules Should Be Kept

An enemy air squadron, on a 30 minute make-believe air attack over northwest Washington, last night dropped incendiary and demolition bombs, partially destroyed a block long stage-prop business section and sent one slow moving citizen to a make-believe hospital with an imaginary leg fracture.

A light left burning by a citizen who ignored the alert signal sounded a few minutes before the raid was held responsible for the damage by Webster R. Frye, deputy warden of the Petworth Defense area.

The raid, property damage and the broken leg were all parts of a demonstration staged by the air-raid wardens of the Petworth Defense area, in Roosevelt High School stadium. More than 5000 citizens of the area saw a first aid corps in action, methods of fighting bombs and efficient auxiliary police force and fire wardens put into practice the accepted rules for the control of crowds during raids.

Raid Sirens Sound

At 7:50 p. m. the sound effects were brought into play simulating the drone of the enemy planes. A few seconds later the blackout warning sounded and more than 60 pedestrians parading in front of the prop stores were hustled into air-raid shelters.

In a final checkup of the neighborhood, the wardens discovered a single light shining from the second floor of one of the buildings. The combined efforts of the police and firemen extinguished the light and brought the offender to task. It was too late, however, and the raid was on. The building was bombed and broke into flames. Only the speedy work of the firemen saved it from complete destruction.

Pedestrian Suffers

One pedestrian, Chester R. Harris, disobeyed the orders of the warden and as a result suffered an imaginary broken leg when struck by a flying bomb fragment. A first aid detachment treated Harris and rushed him to the hospital.

Chief Air Raid Warden Murphy spoke briefly after the demonstration and complimented the Area on "the finest educational device yet used to train citizens in their duties and responsibilities during raids."

Bar Urges D. C. Men in Court Setup

Association Appeals To Biddle to Indorse District Residents For Municipal Bench

A committee of the District Bar Association has urged Attorney General Biddle to indorse local attorneys for positions on the benches of the new Municipal Court and Court of Appeals, it was learned yesterday.

The court merger bill, signed last week by President Roosevelt, creates a lower bench of ten judges by combining the existing Police and Municipal Courts, though still keeping their functions separate. Three judges would sit on the bench of the new appellate division.

The act requires that all judges must have practiced law in the District for at least five years. Two of the lower court judges may live outside the District; the remaining judges must have resided here for at least five years.

Members of the committee on judicial selection which called on the Attorney General were E. Barrett Prettyman, president of the Bar Association; Milton King, treasurer, and Walter Bastian, past president.

Judge Nathan Cayton of the Municipal Court has been recommended by the bar for the post of chief judge of the combined Municipal Court by the committee. A petition is also being circulated in the bar association indorsing the name of Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey and asserting that other lower court judges should not be "slighted."

To the confused picture of bar indorsements was added the report that Alexander Holtzoff, special assistant to the Attorney General, will receive a judgeship in the appellate court.

Ten District Men Take Chemical Course

Ten District men, from the Fire and Police Departments and Air-Raid Warden service, entered the chemical warfare class at Edgewood Arsenal, Md., yesterday to take a 10-day defense course.

They are Frank A. Biondi, James C. Varah and Alfred M. Grunwell, Fire Department; George M. Stewart and Sergt. Karl G. McCormick, Police Department, and Morris H. Clarke, Joseph Sanders, William H. Ronan, William T. Kruglak and Raymond V. Denton, of the warden service.

Demonstration Tonight In Fort Dupont Hall

Deputy Air-Raid Warden Walter Murphy, of the North Randle Civilian Defense Area, announced yesterday that a demonstration of the best methods of combating incendiary bombs would be given tonight at Fort Dupont Community Hall, Thirty-ninth and B Streets Southeast, beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

The Russians Provide Valuable Object Lesson

All-Out War Effort Reflected in New Film; New Bill Opens Tomorrow at RKO-Keith's; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THOSE SUFFERING from America's alleged plague of complacency, all the "parasites" and the labor interests, haggling over the 40-hour week and time-and-a-half for overtime, should sit themselves down and take a look at "Our Russian Front" for a short hour of hard-hitting education in what an all-out war effort really is like.

JULIE HAYDON

In addition to the planes, tanks, big guns, navy and all branches of the ground forces in action, they would see a demonstration of national unity and civilian devotion to the common cause that are Spartan in their courage and sacrifice. They would see aged experts returning from retirement to their mechanical tasks, to release younger men for the firing line; women performing herculean masculine chores, for the same reason, and labor returning to its work on its "day off" to speed up production, without pay. They would see, in short, what stuff it was in the Russians that stopped the Nazis in their bloody tracks and bent them back on their shoulder blades.

On the testimony of the last war, "Our Russian Front" is more or less a preview of the sort of inspiring film record American cameras will be turning out before long to furnish a few more nightmares to kick Mr. Schickelgruber, Mr. Lini, the Muss, and Mr. Hirohito around through their tossing nights. Speed the day.

Previewed yesterday morning in the auditorium of National Archives before an invited audience, "Our Russian Front" will inaugurate its engagement at the Little Theater tonight at 9:30, with a benefit premiere under the auspices of the Russian War Relief, Inc. Patrons are warned that "Foreign Correspondent," the current attraction, will go on for the last time this evening at 6, following which the house will be closed until the gala business at 9:30.

You Win and You Lose

The inability to be in two places at once is becoming increasingly annoying. If we hadn't been at that screening yesterday morning, for example, there would have been no occasion for the note illuminating the bleak disorder of our desk when we returned:

"Hello! We came in to invite you to 'Art and Prudence,' Father Hartke's production on Wednesday night. Father Hartke is here, too, and we love your office and the hope of seeing you again. (Signed) JULIE HAYDON."

Julie Haydon and "Art and Prudence," of course, are a happy anticipation, but no more heartening than that at last a discerning nature has appreciated the tesselated elegance of the drayma department and perceived idyllic beauty in its artistic chaos!

So then Manager Hardie Meakin cracked our reverie across the knuckles with the announcement that the long-awaited RKO-Radio production of "All That Money Can Buy," also will open Wednesday at RKO-Keith's, instead of Thursday, as originally proclaimed This is the William Dieterle picturization of Stephen Vincent Benet's "The Devil and Daniel Webster," which seems to have been handicapped by a less provocative title than the one Mr. Benet gave it. Anyhow, it has a gilt-edged cast, headed by Edward Arnold, Walter Huston, Jane Darwell, Simone Simon, Gene Lockhart, John Qualen, Anne Shirley and James Craig.

Invitation to a Cloudburst

Comes a telegram: "Mount Vernon Open Air Theater, on the Richmond Highway, reopens for the season Sunday, April 12. Have just installed complete new RCA sound equipment, plus brand new world's largest crystal clear screen. As usual, all service men admitted for 20 cents, half admission price. Same policy as previous years still prevails. Always double-feature program. Opening show, Jack Benny's 'Charley's Aunt' and 'Burma Convoy.' EDDIE ALLEN."

If announcement of the opening of Glen Echo Park could bring on a blizzard, the Open Air Theater and the opening ball game, all in the same week, at least ought to produce a cyclone!

Whereupon, Eddie Melcher said hello, Mr. Meakin dropped in, to see if we had received the telephone conversation we'd just had with him, and Jean Dalrymple called up to urge us to hear her "Porgy and Bess" company at the Mayflower. And besides, it was one gorgeous day—so I hear.

Yeah, just one continuous round of pleasure!

Joe Says Mouthful!

Hollywood, Calif., April 6. I just talked with Joe E. Brown, who's the first to go up and entertain our armed forces in Alaska. He's full of praise for what the boys are doing there, and his words came so fast he all but stuttered, but said the need is great for entertainment. Boys in the outposts haven't any. Sure, they get old pictures, but nothing to run them on. So Joe's asking for ten second-hand projection machines, and the general in charge up there will assign men to take them around and show the pictures.

JOE E. BROWN

Among other things they need are comedy air shows. They don't hear any. Why couldn't our shows, like Bob Hope, Fred Allen, Fibber McGee and Molly, Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen, Red Skelton, etc., send up recordings which could be played in the mess halls?

Joe E. traveled 9000 miles just in Alaska, went to the tip end of the Aleutian Islands, was 10 miles from Siberia. One engineer built his own radio, which took in a lot of territory. And when Joe E. entertained, he had a higher rating than President Roosevelt's, which is 92. Joe said, "Mine was 100—only because there was nothing else in the world for them to listen to." He says the morale of the men is marvelous, but they need to be encouraged, and his motto is: "Don't wait—do it now."

Those who complain about funny boys who are allowed to make Army and Navy officers look silly, in pictures about the service, don't mean Abbott and Costello. Those two have never permitted an officer to be made the butt of their antics, which, if you'll notice, generally boomerang right back upon the boys.

Eddie Griffith in New York and has bought the righ's to J. H. Ramsdale's "Romance Came to Andrea," story of an English nurse captured by a Nazi U-boat, and quite a thriller.

Lucille Ball, visiting an Army encampment near her home, was greeted by a sharp whistle from one of the boys, who followed it with, "If you could only cook!" Lucille turned around, went home and flung together a cake, sent it back to the guy.

If you're looking for a job, let your baby be rescued by a movie star. When Baby David James took his famous tumble into the arms of Marlene Dietrich, his papa got so well acquainted around Columbia studio that he's had a regular job there ever since. He's now acting as Glenn Ford's stand in.

Returns 'Home' in Comedy Hit

one of the theater's most illustrious stars, who this week returns to the city of her former residence in the deeply sympathetic role of the mother in "Claudia," playing a return engagement at the National Theater. The other roles of stellar importance are portrayed by Dorothy McGuire, in the title part; Donald Cook and Olga Baclanova

Slightly Modified in Treatment, 'Claudia,' National, Still a 'Must'

By Nelson B. Bell

"CLAUDIA." John Golden presents the play in three acts by Rose Franken. Directed by the author; settings by Donald Oenslager. At the National Theater.

THE CAST

Mrs. Brown.....Frances Starr
David Naughton.....Donald Cook
Claudia Naughton.....Dorothy McGuire
Bertha.....Adrienne Gessner
Fritz.....Frank Tweddell
Jerry Seymoure.....Wilton Graff
Madame Daruschka.....Olga Baclanova
Julia Naughton.....Audrey Ridgwell

"Claudia," the child-wife still clutching at mother's apron strings, returned to the scene of her first triumph last night to weave another spell of gayety, charm and pathos about the hearts of a large and distinguished audience in the National Theater.

Withal its brittle humor, frankness and uninhibited discussion of the intimacies of young married life, Rose Franken also has deftly infused her play with a profoundly moving touch of poignancy in its contemplation of the cycle of human existence, from birth to death, and the courage with which these miracles of joy and sorrow can be met by a child suddenly become a woman. The evolution for Claudia Naughton is not a simple or an easy one. But it is one that brings to Miss Franken's three acts a sturdiness of fiber and a quality of human strength that make "Claudia" unique among modern comedies.

A Violent Pursuit of Laughs

Perhaps never until last evening has Washington realized how preponderantly comic "Claudia" could be made by the antic propensities of the same cast—with one exception—that played it here upon the occasion of its premiere. Until midway of the play and at its very end, subtlety was cast to the winds last night and heavy emphasis laid upon those laughably whimsical notes in both lines and "business" most closely attuned to the stridencies of farce.

By no stretch of the imagination can "Claudia" be made farcical, but the obvious effort, nevertheless, seemed to be in the direction of compounding a maximum of laughs" even in passages in which hilarity is inherent and their multiplication a sheer work of supererogation. A play that is irresistibly amusing and entertaining under any circumstances, as a result, last evening seemed, somehow, a little less sublime, less profundly human and less moving than it had upon its first presentation on the same stage.

Mr. and Mrs. Naughton, however, still are a charming couple, even if a year or so of breasting life's most vital problems together has rather blunted their sense of the seriousness of founding a home and a family and losing a dear one. Dorothy McGuire continues the ideal selection to fulfill the character of the bride who hasn't quite grown up, and Donald Cook still is immensely effective as David, the young husband confronted by such perplexities as only the mind of a scatterbrained innocent could create.

Frances Starr Stars

Mr. Cook's performance is a far lustier one than it used to be, with the greater accent all on the comic content of the part. Miss McGuire's portrayal has been modified most conspicuously by the acquisition of an unfortunate trick of voice that trails each speech off into a retarded, rising inflection that is something less than an increment on the side of virtue.

The one impressively faithful, buoyant, tender and wholly convincing characterization that remains unblemished by superfluous embroidery is the superbly poised portrayal of Mrs. Brown, the secretly tortured mother, by that admirable actress, Frances Starr. Miss Starr's performance last night struck the key to which all of the others might better have been pitched.

The gentle, kindly and grateful servants, who add so unwittingly to the domestic complexities on the Naughton "farm," still are faultlessly played by Adrienne Gessner and Frank Tweddell, and Olga Baclanova and Audrey Ridgwell continue to make Mme. Daruschka, the temperamental diva, and her more quiet, but equally sapient, companion colorful and stunning figures in the intervals of more intensified romance. Wilton Graff, supplanting John Williams as the "British Englishman," who lives next door and precipitates a minor crisis in the Naughton home, copes adequately with an indestructible role.

"Claudia" repeats with aggravated amiability for those who have already seen it and is an imperative "must" for those who have not.

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, April 6.

"Big Time" is the M.-G.-M. musical which will star Judy Garland and Gene Kelly. It's a story about vaudeville. One of the montage-effects in that picture will show some vaudeville-marquees—including that of the famed Palace Theater in 1917. The names of the stars of that year will be used on the marquee. The New York office of M.-G.-M. therefore was instructed to obtain permission to use those names . . . Blanche Ring, Blossom Seeley and others gave their consent. Joe Frisco, who refused to accept less than $4500 a week in vaudeville and held out for ten years until there were no more theaters, was asked for permission to use his name. The price was set, but Frisco is holding out. He wants top-billing on that 1917 marquee.

JUDY GARLAND

Phil La Follette is going into the Army . . . Gerald Mygatt, who became managing editor of Liberty magazine four weeks ago, has resigned because of policy differences. James Hoyn will succeed him . . . In the Gorilla-wedding scene which will feature the new Ringling Circus—opening here on Thursday—the bridegroom, Gargantua, will throw cocoanuts at his bride, Toto. The cocoanuts, designed by Norman Bel Geddes, will be stuffed with wool, to prevent any damage.

Gypsy Rose Lee has sold four articles to the New Yorker magazine . . . Blossom Seeley, the singer who went into retirement six years ago, will become the active partner of her husband, Benny Fields. They'll break in their new act at the Flatbush Theater, for audience-reaction . . . Alfred Lunt, the star, is such an excellent cook that he will give a series of cooking lectures, with the paid admissions going to the American Theater Wing. His lectures, introduced by Constance Collier, will be in three sections—the first devoted to four-burner ranges, the second to three-burner ranges, and the last for Sterno cooking in hall bedrooms.

Last year the Dies Committee announced that Luise Rainer was being "investigated," because she had contributed an ambulance to Spain. The investigation unearthed nothing . . . This week Miss Rainer, now starring in "A Kiss for Cinderella," was asked by the Treasury Department to make a recording—one of a Democracy series now being distributed throughout the country. The material supplied to her consisted of a letter written from jail by Rosa Luxemburg. Miss Rainer consented, but on condition that the United States Treasury first arrange with Mr. Dies to forego an "investigation" of her for reading the letter of a German Communist, supplied by and in behalf of the United States Government.

Tallulah Bankhead, wearing a black wig, surrealist hat and Harlequin eyeglasses, sat in the front of "Let's Face It" Thursday night. She was accompanied by her manager, Stephen Cole, who wore a prop mustache and Van Dyke beard. Their friend, Danny Kaye, came onstage, but pretended to be unaware of their presence—even when, from her seat in the front row, Tallulah focused binoculars upon him. That prtense vanished when, at the finale, young Cole pressed a battery switch in his pocket, and on his shirt-front appeared the illuminated words of Tallulah's radio sponsor, "Call For Philip Morris."

In Washington today the shortage of stenographers and typists is acute. The current story has it that the Federal Civil Service Bureau has a new test for typists. The applicant is taken into a room where there are three objects—a washing machine, a typewriter and a machine gun. If she can distinguish which is the typewriter—she's hired.

WHAT'S THIS, BLOODWORTH A LEAD-OFF MAN?

Jacksonville, Fla., April 6.—To the amazement of Manager Bucky Harris of the Nats, Manager Del Baker of the Detroit Tigers has installed Jimmy Bloodworth, the tradee from Washington, in the lead-off spot in the Detroit batting order.

POVICH

Bloodworth's chief distinction when he was with the Nats was his slowness of foot, and Harris politely inquired of Baker why the second baseman had become his lead-off man. "Don't tell me he has improved his speed," said Harris. "A man can improve his hitting and fielding, but he can't improve his speed."

Baker went into a long explanation of his reason for leading off with Bloodworth. "I can't bat him second because that is Roger Cramer's natural spot. I can't bat Bloodworth third, because that's the spot of Barney McCosky, the best hitter on the club. McCosky's the ideal lead-off man with his speed, but he's too valuable a hitter to put up there. I can't bat Bloodworth fourth because, Rudy York is our power. I can't bat him fifth, or sixth, because Eric McNair and Pinky Higgins figure to drive in more runs.

"I've thought this all out," said Baker, "and Bloodworth is the closest thing to a lead-off hitter that I have. I've never had that problem to contend with before."

Said Harris, thinking of his own puny attack, "You're lucky. You wouldn't have that problem on my club. The trouble with my team is that we've got nine lead-off hitters, and I have to bat some of 'em third, fourth and fifth and all down the line."

Clark Griffith is rueing the day he sold Outfielder Bill Nicholson to the Chicago Cubs, despite the $30,000 he got from the Chicago team. Nicholson, who has blossomed as a home run hitter with the Cubs, would fit very nicely into the punchless Washington outfield this season.

Nicholson was never a member of the Washington team. He was Griffith's property as a member of the Washington-owned Chattanooga club in the Southern Association. Joe Engel, Chattanooga president, persuaded Griffith to sell Nicholson to the Cubs two years ago.

"He's no $30,000 ball player," said Engel, "and you'd better grab the money while you can get it. Besides," added Engel, "Nicholson is hard of hearing. He's so deaf he can't hear the other outfielders telling him to take a ball or lay off it. One of these days he's going to have a bad accident out there."

"I never wanted to sell Nicholson," said Griffith, "but Engel advised me to take the money so I made the deal. I wish I had him back now. I don't care how deaf he is. You don't make those base hits with your ears."

A source of wonder and admiration on the Washington Ball Club is Cuban Bobby Estalella who is playing third base so capably that he is belying the fact that for the last five years he has been an outfielder. Estalella is no picture of grace around third base, but he has been getting his man continually.

The little Cuban is blessed with a superb throwing arm, without which he would be a joke third baseman. He rarely fields a ball cleanly, but he knocks them down with his glove, shins and chest, and retrieves 'em so quickly that he is able to make a play. The hot ones don't feaze him, and one of Estalella's plays on a murderous grounder the other day was typical. The ball bounced off his shins, caromed into his chin and Bobby still got his man at first base with a rapid-fire throw.

Whereupon Outfielder Stan Spence was prompted to remark: "That Estalella may not be the best third baseman in the American League, but by the end of the season he's going to be the most bruised."

Bob Feller may be the best of modern-day pitchers and Lefty Grove and Red Ruffing may be close challengers, but none of them owned the best pitching arm in baseball, declares Manager Bucky Harris.

"The man who's got the best picthing arm I've ever seen is Buck Newsom. He's been getting by on that arm for years," says Harris. "He's never had a sore arm in his life and his arm has withstood more abuse than anybody else's. Newsom has not always been in physical condition, and when he pitches his arm is under more of a strain than any other pitcher's, but that hasn't stopped him from being a winner.

"Newsom has been pitching ball for 18 years and he's a real rubber arm. If some of those other pitchers mistreated themselves the way Newsom does by getting out of shape, their arms wouldn't be worth a nickel. If he had sense enough to stay fit, he'd be baseball's best pitcher.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, April 6.—From a very close friend of a second cousin of an impeachable source we learn that athletes who got commissions or other special ranks in the armed services, because they were celebrities, will be among the first to go—when the going gets tough.

CONSIDINE

Our informant says that the opinion of the brass hats of the Army and Navy seems to be swerving back to the opinion held during the early days of selective service, when there was much talk of how perfectly adapted to combat fighting athletes would be.

However, once the big league athletes began to filter into uniform, the majority was put to work in physical education or morale work. They conducted the calisthenic classes, or took bows at rallies. They were given the job of coaching in their chosen sport, or speaking before groups of men in assemblies, to take a bow or say a few words.

With the coming of December 7, the heroics in the Philippines, the sinkings off the Atlantic Coast and the threat of bombings, no special stimulus has been needed of late to arouse the fervor of the American fighting man. The role of the athlete-in-uniform is running out. He did a good job, while it lasted, but before long he'll be in the same boat or the same trench with the boys over whose heads he jumped on the promotion board. And it is to the credit of the average athlete now in uniform that this new estate will suit him fine.

The commandant of a naval station where a number of prominent athletes have been billeted singled out one of them recently and said: "I like the way you men handle yourselves, and handle others. When the new assignments are made around here I'm going to recommend that you and the other men who did big things in sports be placed in charge of men and equipment in combat zones. I think you personally could handle a PT (torpedo speedboat) better than could a man who hasn't had your experience in the ring—where you've got to be a great judge of distance, have fast reflexes, know how to duck the haymakers . . . and know how to fight back."

That grand writer on turf matters, Nelson Dunstan, brings to light the little known fact that there were three Man o' Wars, or Men o' War. Two of them, the one we all know and a fiery British thoroughbred who lived 50 years ago, sired winners of England's Grand National Steeplechase. One of these winners was Mrs. Randolph Scott's Battleship, who won it in 1937, and the other winner was Manifesto, by the earlier Man o' War. Manifesto won it twice, in 1897 and 1899.

The third Man o' War, who also preceded Sam Riddle's Man o' War, did very little, though he in turn was by the same sire of the great weight-carrying sprinter, Roseben. The Jockey Club rule, by the way, is that a yearling may be given the name of a horse of the past, provided the name has not been used for 20 years.

Dunstan reports that the English Man o' War was a violent beast who tried to kill all grooms, but whose truculence was eclipsed by that of his master, Harry M. Dyas. The kicking, biting Man o' War calmed down like a kitten when Dyas thundered into his stall. Which was plain hoss sense, for Dyas had a peculiar habit of making his employes stand against a wall, with an apple on their heads, while he took aim from 40 yards with a rifle and knocked it off.

We get one postcard per day from a baseball fan who begs us to write a column about "the greatest player who ever lived." That player, the fan always insists, is Charley Gehringer.

But the all-time high for fan loyalty is the case of Sammy Rubin, a New York fight fan, who has been bombarding New York sports desks for years. In one particular his letters never vary. Their subject is Rubin's idol, Benny Leonard.

We are privileged, therefore, to tell you that tomorrow, April 7, is a date that sends Rubin into an ecstatic foam. It is the forty-sixth birthday of the man "generally recognized as the greatest combination boxer-fighter the ring has yet produced . . . known, respected, admired and beloved the world over, Benny has brought honor not only to himself but to his family . . . within two years after winning the world's lightweight championship, Benny engaged in exactly 50 fights; think of it! . . . he is the greatest champion in the history of the ring. Congratulations, Benny Leonard! Sincerely, Sammy Rubin."

How About the Rent And Waterboy, Goldie?

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn thinks Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn is just about the most magnanimous guy in town as he releases his figures on the salaries Harry Bobo and Irish Johnny Flynn will receive for their featured share of next Wednesday's boxing card at Uline Arena.

According to Ahearn, the star, Bobo, recent knockout victor over Lem Franklin, will receive 35 per cent of the gate. Flynn, a 23-year-old comer, will get a flat $1000, according to Ahearn.

Odd Single By Repass Is Decisive

Three Runs Score As Waner's Fielding Fails; Leonard Hurls Well for 7 Innings

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Jacksonville, Fla., April 7.—The locale was different but the result was much the same. The Nats met the Phillies again today and beat them again. The score was 6-3, but the Nats owned nothing better than a 3-3 tie going into the ninth.

Rookie Bob Repass sort of pole-axed the Phils in the midst of their visions of terminating a nine-game losing streak against major league opposition. With the bases full of Nats in the ninth, two out and the score tied 3-3, Repass whaled a single to center and by the time Lloyd Waner retrieved the ball after a futile shoe-string catch attempt, everybody scored except Repass.

The Phils didn't have a whole lot of business making it even close, in fact. They came up with two runs in the eighth to tie the score only because of a freakish home run by Ronnie Northey. With two out and one on, Northy banged one of Hardin Cathey's pitches high against the left field wall. Rookie Leftfielder Alex Kvasnak crashed into the wall with a sickening impact, knocked himself unconscious and Northey ran the hit out for a homer, scoring behind Waner.

Still Had a Lump

Kvasnak was revived and walked unaided from the field, showing no more serious hurts than a lemon-sized lump on his head and a bruised left elbow.

Dutch Leonard, who pitched seven innings for the Nats, did all right. He held the Phils to four hits during that stretch and at one point pitched hitless ball for four straight innings. All told, the Phils were limited to six hits.

The Nats themselves weren't exactly bristling with power against the pitching of Cy Blanton, Ike Pearson and Tom Hughes. They made only eight hits, Mickey Vernon getting three and Bruce Campbell two.

Lloyd Waner's single and Danny Litwhiler's double set the Phils up in a 1-0 lead in the first inning, but they didn't get another hit off Leonard until the sixth. In the third, Leonard himself started a two-run rally with a single to left. Case Walked, Vernon drove a run home with a single to center, and another scored on Campbell's infield out.

Against Pearson in the sixth, the Nats made no hits and one run. Repass walked, Leonard sacrificed him to second, and he scored when Litwhiler played Case's long fly like it was something to be avoided.

Cathey ran into trouble immediately in the eighth, but he had two out when Northey walloped his freak homer. One of the two hits he allowed was a bad-hopping single by Etten.

Vernon launched the ninth-inning drive of the Nats with a double to center with one out. He stole third, but Campbell was a strikeout victim of Hughes. The latter's control took leave of him at that point and he walked Evans and Estalella to fill the bases, at which point Repass poked the game-winning hit to center with everybody under way on a 3-and-2 pitch.

Earnshaw Watched

There was a pretty good pitcher sitting in the stands today . . . He was Lieut. George Earnshaw, of the U. S. Naval Air Force, who ranked second only to Lefty Grove on the A's staff of a dozen years ago . . . Frank Croucher was the day's fielding hero, showing Harris that he could go farther for a ground ball than any second baseman the Nats have had since Harris himself held down the job . . . Croucher had a horrible day at bat though . . . He struck out twice, hit into a double play, grounded out and got hit with a pitched ball . . . Tomorrow the Nats and Phils move to Augusta, Ga., to renew their series . . . The Nats have now won 18 and lost only 6 against big league opposition in the South . . . Bucky Harris has revised his plans in the matter of Rookie Outfielder Alex Kvasnak . . . He is being retained by the Nats, at least temporarily, because he seemingly does everything better than Roberto Ortiz, the other utility outfielder.

Dodgers' 5-Run Rally Fails to Catch Yanks

By the Associated Press

Charlotte, N. C., April 6.—For the first time since the final game of the 1941 World Series, the New York Yankees defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers, 6 to 5.

Spud Chandler was on the mound for the world champions at the start and had the better of a 1-to-0 pitching duel with Johnny Allen, of the Brooklyns for six innings.

Then the National Leaguers saw the advantage go to 2 to 0 in the seventh against Al Sherer, rookie from Montreal, and zoom to 6 to 0 in the eighth when Tommy Henrich and Bill Dickey smote doubles and Ed Levy came along with a single.

The Dodgers got five of those runs back in the eighth on singles by Johnny Rizzo, Frenchy Bordagaray, Joe Medwick, Alex Kampouris and Peewee Reese, plus a walk and an error by Joe Gordon.

Bosox Beat Reds

Bowling Green, Ky., April 6 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox set off a 13-hit barrage, including homers by Lou Finney and Ted Williams, today to gain a 9-6 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds and deadlock their spring training series at five games-all.

Most of the slugging came in the sixth inning, which the Reds opened by scoring five runs on three singles, a double and Eddie Joost's homer to go into a 6-4 lead. Williams then tied the count by hitting for the circuit with a mate on base and the Sockers registered two more runs in the last half of the sixth on a pass, a long fly and a double by Finney.

White Sox Lose

Albuquerque, N. Mex., April 6 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs scored four runs in the fifth inning today, to win a 6-to-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox in a contest called at the end of the fifth inning for weather. It was the Cubs' third win in eight spring series matches with the Sox.

Three of the runs in the fifth-inning rally came in when Charley Gilbert socked an inside-the-park home run with two mates on base. The blow was made off Johnny Humphries, the Sox's second pitcher.

The teams scored a run in the second inning and the Cubs took a 2-1 lead in the fourth when Lou Stringer scored Bill Nicholson with

Banks Gets Nod Over Hernandez In Baltimore

Baltimore, April 6 (AP).—Billy Banks, 133, of Washington, was awarded a unanimous decision tonight in a ten-round fight with Pedro Hernandez, 126¼, of New York.

Banks finished much stronger than the heavily backed Hernandez, and was credited with the last four rounds after Pedro won four earlier rounds. Two were scored even.

In the eight-round semiwindup, Johnny Brown, 161, Baltimore, decisioned El Brookman, 163, Washington.

New Amateur Status Proposed For Service Men

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 6.—Chairman Leo Rains of the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission, today proposed a four-point program for settlement of differences between the Army and the Middle Atlantic District of the Amateur Athletic Union over the activities of soldiers in competition with amateur boxers.

He said he had called a conference for Thursday (2 p. m.), with both sides represented, in an effort to find some settlement.

Recently the Army and the A. A. U. have argued over the union's barring of certain soldier competitors from sports programs run under its sanction.

Rains' proposals:

1. To reward service men participating in amateur bouts with defense stamps instead of cash or merchandise orders.

2. To permit all service boxers to compete in all amateur bouts regardless of membership in the A. A. U.

3. To place all expense money with the special service officer in charge at the soldiers' base.

4. To classify as an "amateur boxer" any service man who has not held a professional boxing license in any State or who has never fought on a professional boxing card in any State not regulated by a commission.

Duke Defeats Maryland Nine Twice, 8-3, 5-3

Special Dispatch to The Post

Durham, N. C., April 6.—Duke University's Blue Devils took both ends of a double-header from the Maryland Old Liners here this afternoon, winning the first, 8-3, and worrying through to a 5-3 decision in the second.

Maryland might have earned an even break in the nightcap, but Pitcher Hartley Crist's first-inning wildness presented Coach Jack Coombs' boys with four runs, and the vistors, although they threatened, never could catch up.

The victories extended the unbeaten Blue Devils' streak to 8 and their Southern conference string to 7.

McCahan Stops Terps

Bill McCahan, righthander, hurled steady 7-hit ball for Duke in the opener. It was the fifth inning before the Terrapins nicked him for a base knock, but that was a home run into deep right-center by Right Fielder Dick Cleveland.

Duke, in the meantime, had grabbed singletons in the first and third frames. The Blue Devils picked up another in the fifth and iced the contest with four in the seventh and another in the eighth.

Maryland's last two runs came in the eighth on a single by Clark

Villanova Pitcher Hurls No-Hitter, But Loses, 2 to 1

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 6.—A Villanova sophomore moundsman and his relief pitched that perfect game today—a no-hitter—but their team lost, 2 to 1.

The University of Vermont capitalized on Henry Donahue's wildness and his teammates' fielding errors to push over its counters. One of Donahue's five walks went to Ziggy Sysko in the third, who promptly stole second and scored on an error. In the next inning, the Roxbury, Mass., pitcher walked Bill Benuit when the catcher erred on a bunt and came home on a long fly to center.

Donahue was forced out with one away in the ninth because of a dislocated elbow. Bon McDonnell fanned the next two batters.

Select Few May See Navy's 4 Grid Games

William and Mary, Virginia, Georgia Tech, Columbia to Play at Annapolis in Fall

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 6.—Navy's home football crowds may be the smallest in history next fall if restrictions prohibiting the general public from entering United States Naval Academy grounds aren't lifted by September.

The regulation, permitting only naval officers, midshipmen and their guests, and civilian instructors within academy gates, first was put into effect shortly after America entered the war.

A general order, pertaining specifically to winter sports, was announced January 7 by Capt. T. S. King, athletic director, then acting academy superintendent.

When Rear Admiral John R. Beardall, installed as superintendent two months ago, took no action respecting the ban last week before spring sports' programs inaugurated, its continuation was automatic.

Capt. King said today the public could not be admitted for football unless the order was revoked or relaxed or some way found to isolate the stadium from the rest of academy property. The grid plant is located at the east end of the academy grounds.

The athletic director reported no steps yet have been taken to isolate the stadium, and declared final reply to the many queries about Navy's home football games probably would not be given until next fall, "when much will depend upon the existing conditions."

If the ban continues during the grid season, sports fans must wait until the third week of the campaign before seing the middies in action.

They meet Princeton's Tigers October 10 at Princeton, N. J., following tilts here September 26 and October 3 with William and Mary and the University of Virginia.

Other Navy home games are scheduled with Georgia Tech, October 24, and Columbia, November 14.

Major Shifts Mark Western Women's Golf

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 6.—The Women's Western Golf Association today made radical revisions in its championship schedule to meet war conditions.

The annual amateur championship, major event on the schedule, was transferred from San Antonio, Tex., to the Sunset Ridge Country Club, Chicago, and will be played August 10 to 15.

Two events were canceled—the 72-hole Derby, set for Chicago August 10 to 13, and the Western junior, scheduled for the St. Paul (Minn.) Town and Country Club, July 14 to 17.

The women's Western Open will be played at Chicago July 22 to 27, as originally scheduled, and this event, with the amateur championship, will attract fields of national caliber.

In place of the junior tournament, the association suggested that each member club hold a special two-day event for juniors.

Carlberg Bows To Champ Tosser

Ted Allen, claimant to the world horseshoe pitching crown, yesterday showed the District's outstanding tosser, Irwin Carlberg, a few fine points of the game as he won three straight games in an exhibition on the Commerce Building courts. Allen, now touring with the Wild West Rodeo at Riverside Stadium, had a ringer percentage of 68 to Carlberg's 51.

Hudson to Pitch Opener Here

Harris Is Confident Tall Georgian Is Ready; Faces Yanks April 14

By a Staff Correspondent

Jacksonville, Fla., April 6.—Not Dutch Leonard. Not Buck Newsom, but Sid Hudson will get the opening-game pitching assignment for the Nats against the Yankees on April 14, Manager Bucky Harris disclosed today.

The honor, delegated to the veteran Leonard for the last three years and eagerly sought this season by the swaggering Newsom, has been given to Hudson because Harris declares him to be the club's best opening-game bet.

"Those other two, Leonard and Newsom, reported late and haven't worked themselves into condition like Hudson," said Harris. "Right now I'd say Sid is our best pitcher. Anyway, you never take much of a gamble when you start Hudson."

Thus full recognition is given the tall Georgia boy who two years ago walked into a major league ball park for the first time and made good in his first season, despite an organized baseball background that embraced only Class D Florida State League experience.

Since joining the Washington club a week ago, Newsom has been slyly hinting that he expected to pitch the opening game of the season. "I'll be in shape for April 14," Buck told reporters after he signed a Washington contract, "and old Bobo will be the first pitcher to beat the Yankees this season."

Transfigure Surprises in MacArthur Handicap at Bowie

Derring Up, Espino Colt Shows Speed

Wins Over Johnnie J. By 2½ Lengths; Pays $24.70; Maechance Takes Third Spoils

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., April 6.—As was fitting, a horse out of a mare named Glorify won the $2000 MacArthur Handicap, featuring the Army Day program here in Prince Georges County, John L. Sullivan's Transfigure was first to the wire in a field of six, but in making the grade this 4-year-old colt turned a form flip-flop which should make him eligible for the main ring in Barnum & Bailey's circus.

Supposed to be the same horse who was ninth, 14 lengths behind Cape Cod, in the Rome Memorial Handicap last Thursday, Transfigure was transformed into a bundle of speed today and galloped off with the 6-furlong sprint by 2½ lengths. C. E. Nelson's Johnnie J., which appeared to be rather unenergetically handled, was second and a length and a half in advance of Paul Bieber's Maechance.

The two heaviest played horses in the field finished last and next to last, respectively. They were Madigama, who did a lot of front running before stopping, and Clyde Tolson, who never got up a gallop.

Transfigure carried a $24.70 price tag mainly because the crowd could not forget that dismal race of last week. His time was 1:12 1-5. About the only thing in his favor (the weight was the same) was that today's track was dry and fast and last Thursday's surface was dull.

Jockey Joe Deering put up a strong ride on Transfigure today. He had the Espino colt off alertly. Deering rated him on the outside while Madigama was racing himself into submission. Approaching the stretch, the boy urged Transfigure, and the colt responded with a rush that was not to be denied. Jockey Red Pollard, on Johnnie J., put up what appeared to be timid riding, but his mount was good enough to be second ahead of Maechance.

Shadows Pass Wins Again

The championship for consistency over this track goes to Isadore Bieber's Shadows Pass. This 6-year-old, a winner here last week, simply galloped through the stretch to defeat nine other sprinters in the sixth race. Bill's Sister was second and Neutrality third. Shadows Pass was a $5.20 favorite and was the second winner for the Bieber colors and Trainer Hirsch Jacobs. This was the fifth time in as many tries that Shadows Pass has visited the winner's circle here.

Bieber's Who Reigh, well handled by Apprentice Charlie Wahler, won the third race. This plater came from last position and was in on the rail all the way. He paid $9.30 and won by two lengths from Nilon, with Rough Going third.

Porter's Cap Finally Wins Tropical Race

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., April 6.—Charles S. Howard's Porter's Cap finally won a Florida race today, earning a close victory in a $1200 6-furlong handicap at Tropical Park.

The horse, a disappointment all winter, was the favorite in the field of nine and paid $4.90 for $2 to win, $3.30 to place and $2.50 to show.

W. Rold's Hour Al barely was beaten in a photo, while Woolford Farm's Silvestra was third.

The time of 1 minute 10 3-5 second was three-fifths off the track record.

Turf Association Names Col. Winn Prexy 12th Time

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 6.—Col. Matt Winn was reelected president of the American Turf Association for the twelfth successive time at the annual meeting of the Board of Directors today. All other officers were reelected, and Louis Herrmann, of Louisville, Ky., was chosen a member of the board.

The association controls Churchill Downs in Louisville, home of the Kentucky Derby; Lincoln Fields, in Chicago; Latonia Race Track, also in Kentucky, and Douglas Park, a race track property also in Louisville.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

The Christiana Stable has lost a Kentucky Derby candidate. Half Crown, purchased as a yearling for $16,000 was cut down in his race here last week. The colt was running third at the time and finished last. Several of the half-mile riders had some trouble getting their licenses here. Understand they got a pretty stiff warning which is as it should be. Requested, B. F. Whitaker's Kentucky Derby hope, arrived yesterday at Havre de Grace. Requested won the Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah in sensational fashion, being almost left at the post. He will go to the bat in the $15,000 added Chesapeake Stakes before being shipped to the Blue Grass classic. Galt Davis lost Flying Duke via the claiming route last week. They bet $576,000 here last Saturday without Art Brown. The WOL windbag is tied to the big organ in the pit at the Capitol Theater until Thursday. He will be out here Friday in all his glory with a fresh bankroll. Too many people, who write about horses, getting their pictures in the papers these days, if you know what I mean. Norman Stanton is handling the riding engagements of Jockey Danny Scocca. I'm going to see if I can't get Scocca the mount on Walter Haight the next time out. Coming out yesterday we were discussing the change in the weather hereabouts. A blizzard one Sunday and swimming temperature the next. Jockey Noboy Jake spoke up, "War weather, man. Always that way in war times—tough, tough, tough." Then he added, "I don't care how hot it gets around here, just so it keeps on freezing in Russia."

BILL.

First race—The Emanuel, Guest, Smith entry has three chances to produce the winner of this maiden, juvenile dash. PAILLE, ZOUAVE and BUDDED are the youngsters. FAIRACTION is said to be a good one and may be in the pay circle. LADY TENNIE has a money chance.

Second race—OLD ROSEBUSH seems to have a lock and key on this sprint. Needs only the right handling. SUN TRIAD was a fair sort in Florida and has retained his form. RING UP has worked well.

Third race—UVALDE fits well in this field and has had one outing over the track. Should improve enough to beat these. TANGANYIKA always goes well over this oval and is a threat. DRUCO SYSKA closed much ground last out.

Fourth race—NEDDIE BOY was shut off while making his move last week. Came gamely in the stretch despite being impeded and I'm going to string along. ACCUSE ME belongs close. NO DOUGH was prominent last out.

Fifth race—PETE'S BET may forget to stop in this group. Probably needed that last. LIBERTY CAP and SOLAR STAR to fill out the money bracket.

Sixth race—NIGHT GLOW appears to be the solid one in this group. Needs only the right handling. MOON MAIDEN was a keen winner recently. WEATHERITE should improve off that last.

Seventh race—VALDINA VALET and ROSCOE K. are a tight fit in this distance affair and I prefer them in the order named. BARUNA can't be as bad as that effort last week.

Eighth race LEE'S JIMMIE missed for us by a nose last week at 10-1. We won't get that price today, but we should get a winner. CHESTNUT BUR and DAY IS DONE for the place and show.

Best bet—NEDDIE BOY.

FIREGLAS forged to the front in the opening furlong, drew clear approaching the stretch, but weakened and barely lasted. LITTLE BUD was in the first flight from the break, came to the inside in the stretch run and closed resolutely under strong urging. BELLE SOMA, first away, could not stay with the pacemaker, but showed a good effort. VEE went evenly and could not threaten seriously.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1200. For 3-year-old fillies; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:05. Off at 3:05. Winner, J. L. Collins' ch. f. (3) by Hard Tack—Teco. TECO TACK, off in the first flight, raced SWEET ZACA into defeat to draw clear, withstood the bid of BONNY LIBERTY and just lasted to stave off the closing rush of CASTLERIDGE. The latter raced forwardly on the outside and closed with good energy. BONNY LIBERTY was forced to race on the inside in the slowest going and weakened.

Daily Double, FIREGLAS and TECO TACK, Paid $81.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHO REIGH, $9.30, $4.10, $2.90; NILON, $3.40, $2.70; ROUGH GOING, $3.60.

WHO REIGH, off slowly and allowed to settle into his best stride, improved his position gradually along the rail, obtained racing room throughout, responded to pressure in midstretch and won going away. NILON was hustled to the front, opened a wide lead and held on gamely, but was no match for the winner. ROUGH GOING was bumped in the first furlong, was rushed to contention and held on with good courage in the final drive. BOSTON PAL was rated while closest to the pace and flattened out when placed to pressure.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1500. For 3-year-olds; allowances. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:59½. Off at 3:59½. Winner, J. H. Louchheim's b. c. (3) by Infinite—Careful. Trained by J. Loftus. Value to winner, $1000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CARMUS, $4.50, $3.00, $2.50; FIREBROOM, $3.70, $2.80; BOLA MOWLEE, $3.30.

CARMUS was in the thick of contention from the start, disposed of FREE DOUBLE and INDIAN SUN to take command and was put to extreme pressure in the final sixteenth to hold FIREBROOM safe. The latter was within striking distance from the start, responded when shaken up and was wearing down the winner at the end. BOLA MOWLEE raced on the outside, lost much ground turning for home and closed willingly. INDIAN SUN was rated while setting and forcing the pace and tired in the closing stages.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2000. For 3-year-olds and upward. The General MacArthur Handicap. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:29½. Off at 4:29½. Winner, John L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRANSFIGURE, $24.70, $9.90, $6.10; JOHNNIE J., $8.10, $5.30; MAECHANCE, $5.10.

TRANSFIGURE, a keen forward factor from the break, disposed of MADIGAMA to tak command and drew out in the final stages. JOHNNIE J., off alertly, was taken under restraint while saving ground and closed with good energy. MAECHANCE showed an even effort. RIDING LIGHT was within striking distance and closed willingly. MADIGAMA was used up setting the pace under hustling tactics. CLYDE TOLSON dropped out of it in the opening furlong and showed a dull effort.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1500. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:01. Winner, I. Bieber's br. h. SHADOWS PASS, not hurried in the early stages while saving ground, came through on the inside to reach contention with a bold move and disposed of BILL'S SISTER to draw out handily. BILL'S SISTER took command at once, opened a long lead and held on gamely. NEUTRALITY showed a good forward effort. RING STAR closed with good energy from a sluggish beginning.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1500. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:27½. Off at 5:22. Winner, A. V. Galotta's br. ff. SARAN, taken under restraint while saving ground and well placed early, drifted out for racing room approaching the stretch and responded to vigorous handling to wear down YANNIE SID. The latter took the lead with a rush at the first turn, set a good pace and fought it out with good courage. GUERRILLA was always close up to mid-stretch and weakened suddenly. JANEGRI went evenly.

Wilson High's Timely Hits Whip Episcopal, 7-0, in Opener

Saine, Ellis Check In Six-Hitters

Tigers Jam Three Doubles Into 4th Inning; 2d Loss For Alexandrians

Though it enjoyed no edge in the number of hits, Woodrow Wilson High's baseball team managed for a 7-to-0 advantage in runs yesterday as it opened its season auspiciously against Episcopal on the Alexandrians' field.

Each team collected six hits in the game, postponed from last week because of the snow. The type and timeliness of the Tigers' hits made the difference.

In the fourth inning, when scoring was opened, a trio of Tiger doubles was responsible. Don Hillock crashed out the first after two mates were out. Sullivan walked and Buddy Lemerise sent both runners home with the second two-bagger. Billy Jawish immediately scored Lemerise with the third.

A walk, sacrilce and Sullivan's single notched another Wilson run in the eighth inning, and in the ninth another trio was scored on a base on balls, consecutive Episcopal errors and Freddy Vinson's single.

Carl Soine, converted gridman, went the first eight innings for the winners, allowing all of Episcopal's hits. He was faced by Jim Ellis, who went the route for the losers, striking out nine. It was the second Episcopal loss in three days to a District of Columbia public school nine, Anacostia having taken an 11-2 decision Saturday.

Mize Gets 4 for 4

Greenville, Miss., April 6 (AP).—Johnny Mize snapped out of his spring-long batting slump today with four straight hits but the New York Giants lost their seventh game in nine attempts to the Cleveland Indians, 6 to 5.

The Giants battered Jim Bagby, nine-inning hurler for the Indians, for 12 hits but couldn't get them at the right time. Cleveland was able to collect only six but two were homers by Manager Lou Boudreau and Jim Hegan.

All the Indian tallies came in the fourth. With one away, Ken Keltner doubled, Jeff Heath walked and Oscar Grimes singled Keltner home. Then Boudreau homered and after Roy Mack walked Hegan deposited a ball in almost the same spot.

Mize's single, Willard Marshall's triple and an error by Grimes produced two Giant runs in the sixth and the big first baseman's double in the eighth meant another run.

Braves Lose Again

Sanford, Fla., April 6 (AP).—The Boston Braves dropped an 8-3 game to the Milwaukee Brewers, their fourth setback in five starts against minor league opposition, today when they made their new training camp.

The Brewers teed off against Al Javery in the fourth inning and clinched the game by clubbing him for five runs after he had retired two batters. The Brewers then collected six singles and the Braves prolonged the rally by making two errors.

Cards Break Camp

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 6 (AP).—The pennant-minded St. Louis Cardinals broke camp today with big question marks hanging over the first base and left field jobs—both in the hands of rookies.

Manager Billy Southworth said "it was our most successful training season," but admitted he had his fingers crossed. If Stan Musial makes the grade in left and Ray Sanders at first his worries will be over. But if they should fail, Johnny Hopp, the Cards' general handy man, can plug but one of the holes.

"That's the awful truth," admitted Southworth.

Tigers Take 27

Lakeland, Fla., April 6 (AP).—Ending a six-week stay here, the Detroit Tigers broke camp today and headed northward with 27 players, nearly half of them newcomers, for the start of the American League season.

Browns Hit Road

De Land, Fla., April 6 (AP).—With the best pre-season record of any team in the American League, the St. Louis Browns broke camp today and started north hopeful of being the "dark horse" of baseball this summer.

Baseball Set For Duration, Bramham Says

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., April 6.—Ten minor leagues have disbanded, but William G. Bramham, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, asserted today that organized baseball still is in the strongest position in its history.

"These are troublesome times and anything may happen. Baseball is a business and it will prosper just so long as other business does," the portly, white-haired chieftain of all the minor leagues commented.

"But no matter what happens, baseball is in the best shape of its existence. It has a sound structure from top to bottom and if we had to cease playing tomorrow we could take up where we left off as soon as we were permitted.

No More Cow Pastures

"When many leagues collapsed during the last war the old wooden stands rotted and cows were turned out to pasture on what had been the playing fields. After the war many clubs found they had no place to play when baseball was resumed.

"In the last ten years steel and concrete ball parks have been erected with public and private funds all over the country, and this time we are assured of a place to play.

"There has not been any panic in baseball. Every league that has disbanded, three of them Class C and seven Class D, has taken the step only after carefully considering the situation and making every possible effort to continue.

"At least two of the leagues voted to preserve the surplus that existed in their treasuries, and one of them decided to meet again next January to see if operations could be resumed in 1943."

The leagues that have dropped out are the Arizona-Texas, Michigan State, Cotton States, Alabama State, Coastal Plain, Eastern Shore, Florida State, Northeastern Arkansas, Ohio State and Western. There were 43 minor leagues last year.

Deaton Rolls Flat 98 at Brookland

A new league record for flat game was rolled in the Odd Fellow bowling loop last night by Carson Deaton, Brightwood, who found the Brookland drives to his liking and came up with a 98 total, just two pins from perfection. Harold Hodges' 148 high single for Golden Rule sparked his team to best game of 620 and three in a row from the leaders, Amity No. 1, while Marc Fonoroff's 394 top set was of no avail as his boys dropped all three to Amity No. 2. Charles Hatten's 141-384 sparked Columbia No. 1 to a sweep over Columbia No. 2 and high set of 1,752 as well. Earl Steele's 378 set was a near high.

ARCADIA

Bill Porter, Signal Corps, and Bill Reid, Field Service, each had 144 to tie for high individual single honors in the Navy Department League with Paul Madson's 391 for S. & A. taking the set laurels. S. & A. and Commandants shared the team high after respective highs of 602 and 1683.

NORTHEAST

Ollie Pacini's single pin event closed last evening with Howard Parsons, Baltimore, proving to be the best sharpshooter of a large field and taking down first money with a score of 46 out of a possible 50. Both Astor Clarke and Cletus Pannell, Washingtonians, had 45, to tie for second place, with Bill King, Nova Hamilton, Lou Jenkins and Billy Stalcup tying for third place with 44 each.

ICE PALACE

Bob Willis' 155-393 and John Simmons' 407 were best efforts in the Commercial League, their totals enabling the Dome Oil boys to take team highs after pinfalls of 647-1880, also winning three from National Beer. American Valet won two from Essex Construction with Epstein's 149-373, while Jack Talbert's 146-424 for the Ice Palace were unable to stave off the dropping of a pair to J. C. Flood.

Dorothy Kirby Advances, 1 Up, To Semifinals

By the Associated Press

Augusta, Ga., April 6.—Defending Champion Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, was forced to wage a bitter battle against young Mary Jane Garman, of Sarasota, Fla., before gaining a 1-up decision to enter the semifinals of the twelfth annual Forest Hills women's tournament.

Miss Kirby's slim victory qualified her for tomorrow's test with Georgia Tainter, pretty Fargo (N. Dak.) veteran who posted a 2-up victory over Mrs. Charles D. Hambaugh, of Cleveland.

The other semifinal contest will be between North and South Champion Louise Suggs, of Lithia Springs, Ga., and youthful Jane Crum, of Orangeburg, S. C. Miss Suggs survived by eliminating Eileen Stulb, of Augusta, 5 and 3, while Miss Crum ousted Jeane Cline, 15-year-old Bloomington (Ill.) girl, 7 and 5.

In winning over Miss Garman, Miss Kirby fired a 1-under women's par 76. The winner went to the seventh green with a four-hole advantage, but lost the next three holes and turned 1 up.

Maryland Bows Twice to Duke

Hudak, Roscoe Whipp's long triple, and a line single by Stuffy Evans.

Tom Burns, Duke third baseman, led an 11-hit attack on Jack Wright, Maryland's big righthander, with four safe blows in five trips to the plate.

The Old Liners lost the second game in a hectic first stanza. Crist never could get the ball over, walking three, hitting two and uncorking one wild pitch. An error and a passed ball added to his woes.

Max Hunt relieved Crist with two out in the first and did well the rest of the way, holding Duke to a single run and six scattered safeties. But the damage had been done.

Bobby Bruns Wins 'Title' From Komaroff at Uline's

By Oscar Elder

Something dubiously identified as the world's junior heavyweight wrestling "championship" changed hands for the second time within a week at Uline's Arena last night when Challenger Bobby Burns manhandled Titleholder Ivan Komaroff before 1000 howling fans in the feature match of the show.

This bout and the semiwindup between a big-hooded stooge known as The Octopus and Prince Emir Jo Jo were all that kept the card from being a dismal affair, indeed. Until the semifinal, all that could be said for the arena was that it was a cool place to spend the evening—if you could stand the show.

Komaroff, who copped the crown from Karol Krauser last Monday night, put up quite a scuffle before he finally succumbed to the latest script and bowed out to the handsome Bruns on a dropkick and body press in 28 minutes.

The champ, who is listed as a Russian Cossack, started strong with a headlock that Bruns found hard to shake. Finally, he bounded out to floor Ivan with an armlock. This irked the Russian no end and he went berserk with a slugging attack that encompassed Bruns, Referee Tom Gilhausen and the entire ring. The arbiter protested, and while he and Ivan were exchanging persiflage, Bruns snuck up and pulled a "Pearl Harbor" on the Cossack, chunking him out of the ring with a rousing heave. Not content with this, he then flattened the referee. Komaroff clambered in and tossed Bruns out, scattering benches all over the place. Bobby stormed back in and unloosed a teeth-rattling dropkick and followed with a body press to win possession of the title and the ornate belt (still in need of dry cleaning) that goes with it.

The Octopus used a body slam and a press to sadden Prince Emir Jo Jo, the Arabian glamour boy, after 20 minutes of the semifinal. This battle was rough all the way and bodies were flying about the premises like starlings.

It seems that the lads spotted a press photographer and they gave their all to make his stay profitable. The masked Octopus, almost seven feet tall, did everything but shoot Prince Jo Jo in the early phase of the bout, but the mustachioed royal one came back with his own oriental mayhem to give the fans some vicarious thrills before he finally lost his grip.

Irish Jack Kelly and George Becker put on a very scientific and gentlemanly draw, and Pierre DeGlane, the Frenchman, bounced Chief Bamba Tabu in 16 minutes with two flying tackles and a body press.

In the opener, Zimba Parker, the colored Hercules, groaned to a stalemate with Michele Leone, of Italy, in 30 minutes. This match presented a bit of a mystery for Leone bore a most remarkable resemblance to a fellow called Carlos Firpo, of South America. Firpo has appeared on every extravaganza since Goldie Ahearne went in the wrestling business some five months ago.

Last night was the first time that he hasn't been on the card, but this stranger, Michele Leone looked and talked exactly like the South American. Questioned about this phenomenon, Promoter Ahearne blandly suggested that maybe the two were brothers, or something.

Little Hoyas, Riders Choice In School Golf

A two-month series of high and prep school golf matches in the public school and metropolitan sections of the Scholastic League get under way today with 12 of the 14 teams in action on six private courses.

In the seven-team public sector Roosevelt's defending champions, with such promising young shotmakers as Charley Grimm, Arthur Myers, Bill Brownrigg and Joe Barse back in the line-up, rule as top-heavy favorites to retain the Dawes Cup.

Georgtown Prep is holdover titlist in the Metropolitan section, but the Little Hoyas face a real threat in a good Bethesda line-up headed by Alton Willett, last year's surprise individual champion, and including Buster Mrstik and Dick Poerstel.

No Standout Players

Little is known of a majority of the schoolboy teams, but the best material is apparently distributed between the three above-mentioned favored schools. For the first time in years, there is not an outstanding individual star such as Bobby Brownell, Andy Oliveri, Ralph Bogart, Buddy Sharkey or Earle Skinkner.

League sponsors hold little hope for a championship playoff between the two sectional champions, as public high authorities have frowned on the match in the past. A bulk of the material has been centered among the private and prep school teams.

Roosevelt will open up with a newcomer to the league today in Calvin Coolidge High at Manor Club. Central and Anacostia clash at Army and Navy while Wilson, 1940 public school champ, meets Tech at Congressional in two other Dawes Cup matches. Anacostia and Tech have staged an annual battle for the cellar berth the last few years.

Bethesda Faces Gonzaga

Bethesda and Gonzaga go to Kenwood for a match in the metropolitan sector while Devitt and St. Alban's, two contenders with little-known possibilities, meet at Columbia, and Blair and St. John's open up at Woodmont.

Georgetown Prep and Western will make delayed debuts in their respective sections. Each school will present six-man teams and play will be match play, individual and best ball matches.

Frank Emmet is again supervisor of schoolboy with the District Golf Association aiding in securing the courses. Julian Colangelo, of Coolidge, assisted in the public high schedule-making.

Georgetown Golfers Lose To Carolina

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 6.—Sophomore Dick Doeschler shot a one-over-par 73 for the feature individual performance in a 18½-to-8½ victory for North Carolina golfers over Georgetown here today.

Buddy Sharkey, No. 1 Georgetown player, handed Capt. Lawrence Neese his first intercollegiate dual meet loss in another highlight match.

The victory was Carolina's second in as many starts. The loss was Georgetown's second on its current trip. The Hoyas lost to Duke Saturday, previously Carolina had beaten Penn.

Summary:

Sharkey (G.) defeated Neese (N.C.), 3 points to 0; Doeschler (N.C.) defeated Halligan (G.), 2 points to 1. Best ball, North Carolina, 2 points to 1.

Pro Net Tour of U. S. Reaches Untimely End

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, April 6.—The All-Star tennis tour featuring Donald Budge, Bobby Riggs, Frank Kovacs and Fred Perry came to an end today.

Business Manager Harry M. Thayer said that all future bookings had been canceled.

Decision to discontinue the tour came after a telephone conversation between Alexis Thompson, of New York, sponsor of the tour, and Thayer.

The tour, which started out auspiciously from New York last December 26, has encountered difficulties it cannot conquer, Thayer said in a formal statement today. The tour was to have ended in the East early next month after a swing through the South and Midwest.

Matches canceled included appearances in Nashville, Fort Wayne and Evansville, Ind.; Akron, Northampton, Mass.; White Plains, N. Y.; Hartford, Conn., and the final point on the scheduled tour, Jersey City, May 4.

Thayer, in summing up tour problems, said 15 per cent of the originally scheduled matches had been called off because buildings were taken over by the Government for war purposes. In California alone five matches were canceled for this reason. It was impossible to buy new tires for a truck which carried the tour equipment, including a canvas tennis court covering.

Thayer said the management had been able in only 25 per cent of the matches played to present the original four players named in the all-star cast—Budge, Riggs, Kovacs and Perry. Paid attendance in 71 cities played was listed as 101,915.

"Each member of the playing personnel has been missing from the line-up because fo injury or illness at some time or other during the progress of the tour," Thayer said.

Hudson to Pitch Opening Game

will rotate in starting roles on Harris' pitching staff as fixtures with Jack Wilson and Early Wynn the leading candidates for the traditional fourth starting job.

Rookie Wynn, who impressed Harris with his cleverness in a late-season trial last summer, winning three and losing one, came to the Nats' camp labeled as a regular starter on the staff but the veteran Wilson has been demonstrating that he deserves a starting chance. Both Wynn and Wilson have been pitching winning ball in the South, and Harris is reluctant to make a choice between them.

Alex Carrasquel remains the No. 1 relief pitcher on the squad and the likeliest among that group to be graduated to a starting role. Harris considers himself strongly fortified in relief men with Bill Zuber available in addition to rookie sensations Phil McCullough and Hardin Cathey.

Gonzaga, Colts Open Baseball Cards Today

Two more Washington schoolboy nines get their first taste of formal action today when Gonzaga and Coolidge, each liberally sprinkled with veterans, come to grips at the Coolidge lot at 4 p. m.

Preparing for its first start in the public school baseball league, Coolidge boasts a fairly strong line-up, but it may be facing one of the toughest clubs in the city in Gonzaga today. The Catholic team figures to hit at a terrific pace. In addition it has Billy Carroll, brilliant American Legion veteran, to head a pitching staff that includes up-and-coming Blaine Fitzgerald and Jimmy Hurson.

Topping the Purple sluggers are Elmer Raba, all-around sports star, who will hold forth in center field; Red Murphy, shortstop, and Bob Smith, first baseman. The last two shone on last year's club. The remainder of the team will consist of Bernie Nolan, replacing Franny Vincent as catcher; Joe Claveloux at second; Al Lauck at third; big Jim O'Keefe in left field and Ronny Waldron in right.

Against this line-up Coach Sherman Rees, of Coolidge, will probably start Bernie Shankman on the mound. A southpaw, he will be replaced by Le Melnicove, a right-hander, if necessary.

The Colts' hitting will be mainly in the hands of Ralph Meiklejohn, shortstop, and Outfielder Bill Penn. What the remained of the team can furnish in the way of batting power is still a question. The other starters will be Frank Fleinknecht, first base; Jim Murphy, catcher; Bill Koenig and Popeye Martin in the garden, and Orrison at third, and Addy Bassin at second base.

Warmerdam Named "Best" Trackman

New York, April 6 (AP).—Cornelius Warmerdam, the California school teacher who raised the world indoor pole vault mark to 15-feet-7¼-inches, today, was voted the outstanding track and field athlete of the indoor season by the New York track writers.

Warmerdam nosed out Greg Rice, the world's top 2-miler who has not been beaten since way back when winner of the two previous awards. Leslie MacMitchell, New York University's miler, was third and John Borican of the Asbury Park, N. J., A. C. fourth.

Books Closed On 1½-Billion Federal Issue

By the Associated Press

Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday the Treasury's offering of $1,500,000,000 of Treasury certificates of indebtedness was "very well received."

He praised the thousands of securities dealers who, he said, did an "exceptionally good job" in familiarizing the investing public with the details of the issue.

He added that it was possible that the Treasury might in the future use the same method of introducing other new types of securities.

The certificates, which bear one-half of one per cent interest and mature in six and one-half months, are a type of Treasury obligation which had not been sold since 1934. The Treasury enlisted the help of dealers and others, therefore, to explain the issue to potential investors.

While no figures were available, preliminary reports were enough to permit the Treasury to close the subscription books at the close of business yesterday.

Subscriptions placed in the mail, however, will be considered if postmarked before midnight.

Bond Trade Interest Centers on Issue

New York, April 6 (AP).—The Treasury Department's new offering of $1,500,000,000 in certificates of indebtedness attracted most attention in today's bond market, resulting in small price changes in the corporate group and severely restricted activity in existing United States Government obligations.

Most of the large banks and bond houses reported wide interest in the Government certificates, especially among the smaller investors and corporations which had the assurance of the Treasury Department in advance that all subscriptions up to $25,000 would be allotted in full.

That Government bond dealers were preoccupied with the new offering was indicated by the relatively small turnover in listed Treasury loans. Less than $25,000 changed hands on the Stock Exchange, with small gains predominating. While there was a better volume over the counter, net changes in that market also were negligible.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, April 6 (AP).—Wheat prices fell as much as 1⅞ cents early today, May futures slipping to $1.22⅛, lowest since December 6, but the market rallied briskly late in the session to recover all the loss and finish a shade higher.

At the low point wheat showed losses of about 8 cents since midMarch and as much as 12 cents compared with the four-year peaks registered in January. Traders said selling was based largely on the favorable new crop situation. Buying on the rally came from previous short sellers and some brokers claimed mills also were represented although their support was limited.

Wheat closed unchanged to ⅜ cent higher compared with Saturday's finish. May 1.23⅛@1.23¾, July 1.25⅛@1.25¾, corn ⅛@⅜ higher, May 88⅛@88¼, July 90⅝@90¾, oats ⅝@⅞; soybeans 1⅛@1¾ higher; rye ⅜@⅝ higher; lard unchanged at cellings.

The market yielded to increased profit taking and liquidation which appeared on the rise. Price selling uncertainties and fears of possible Government action to check the rising price trend made buyers cautious and encouraged freer selling.

Southern Building Tops 900 Million For New Record

Baltimore, April 6 (AP).—Southern building and industrial construction for the first quarter of the year rose to $931,059,000, far above totals for any comparable period of previous years, the Manufacturers Record said today.

Construction contracts awarded in the 16 Southern States in March totaled $395,102,000, an almost unprecedented monthly figure, the Record said. August, 1941, was the one month of the past that topped March.

Federal funds for further military expansion accounted for a large part of the gain, with the bulk of newly initiated construction having been undertaken by Federal and local Government agencies. The Record said 72 per cent of the March total went into military construction, public housing programs to alleviate crowded defense areas and school buildings for the children of immigrants.

Industrial awards totaled $149,256,000 so far this year. The comparable period of last year was credited with much more than twice that figure. The Record explained that the accent was currently on production rather than on establishing new plants.

Reynolds Cites Rapid Growth in Aluminum Output

New York, April 6 (AP).—Because of the intense, stepped-up war effort, the president of the Reynolds Meats Co. today said the organization's present expanded capacity for aluminum alloy production now exceeds the Nation's total output in 1939.

R. S. Reynolds, executive of the company which has 30 separate manufacturing units in 18 cities in 13 States, said in his annual report to the stockholders:

"The company's operations are fast becoming integrated to the point where the successive stages of production, from the mining of bauxite to the fabrication of aluminum products, will enable the company to supply the much needed material for additional thousands of military planes.

"In this great emergency we face the future with confidence. . . . We not only have our own domestic bauxite mines, but we also have favorable contracts for foreign bauxite in the Western Hemisphere."

Reynolds reported the company's 1941 net income was $2,867,674, equal, after preferred dividends, to $2.53 a common share, compared with 1940 net profit of $2,428,277, or $2.10 a share.

Quota-Exempt Sugar Assured to Packers

By the Associated Press

Packers were notified by the War Production Board yesterday that they might obtain quota-exempt sugar in quantities sufficient for the first canning, preserving or quick-freezing of fruits and vegetables.

The exemption does not apply, under official interpretation of the sugar quota plan, to sugar desired for secondary processing—that is, for the removal of the fruit from cans for reuse in jams, marmalades or combination packs for which additional sugar would be required.

Banks' Loans Continue Dip During Week

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday the second small drop in an many weeks for business loans of banks.

Thes edeclines appeared to be a temporary interruption of the marked increases which have been occurring for about a year and a half. In the week ended April 1, commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks in 101 leading cities declined five million dollars, to a total of $7,003,000,000. Steel Conservation Order Anticipated

Cleveland, April 6 (AP).—An order for steel conservation probably will be issued by the War Production Board this week, Daily Metal Trade said today.

"It is reliably reported WPB experts find that there is very little chance of keeping a consumer from obtaining steel and a new conservation order is said to be in preparation which will prevent the fabricating of steel even if it is obtained," the trade publication reported, and added:

"It is expected that the conservation order will apply to the fabrication of a large number of steel commodities."

Stocks Join Commodities In Broad Rise

By the Associated Press

New York, April 6.—A broad rally in stocks contributed to a brightened picture for leading speculative markets today.

Share prices, moving in step with cotton, grains, hogs and other commodity futures, stretched their April gains by fractions to a point or more. A few specialties finished 2 to more than 5 points higher.

The market's comeback was aided in no small way by a sharp tapering of offerings after disposal of the accumulated selling orders of the weekend. Buyers seemed to have little more confidence in consequence of Saturday's steadiness in the face of Senate proposals for a stringent limitation on war profits.

This strengthened belief in speculative circles that the market had reached something of saturation point on bad news, and that the almost continuous decline in prices the last several months warranted expectations of a turn.

Slight Dip at Close

There was no reaction to the disclosure today that War Production Chief Nelson had told a Senate committee he believed the "majority of industry" was willing to forego war profits entirely if given protection against capital impairment. Just before the close, however, there was a slight retreat from the highs as a result of profit selling.

A rise of .4 of a point in the Associated Press combined with the small gains picked up in Easter week erased a fair part of the March decline. The measure closed at 35.0.

Transfers totaled 335,200 shares compared with 371,760 in the previous five-hour trading session.

Among the higher closings were American Can, Westinghouse, U. S. Steel Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Union Carbide, General Electric, Johns-Manville American Telephone, Texas Co. and Santa Fe.

Store Shares Buoyant

Prominence of merchandising stocks was associated with March sales reports of several mail order and retail chains showing big increases over the same month last year.

Coca-Cola climbed 5¾ to accompaniment of stories the sugar situation had become less threatening for big consumers.

Bonds were steady. Cotton futures slipped back after reaching new highs since 1929 but retained net gains of 25 cents a bale for some positions. Hogs soared 1 to a 16-year peak. Wheat finished unchanged to ⅜ of a cent a bushel higher and corn moved up ⅛ to ½.

Leaders in a generally improved curb included Aluminum Co., American Co., American Cyanamid, Gulf Oil, Humble and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Dealings here were about 61,000 shares against 72,000 Thursday.

Protest Filed in Maryland On Policy Loan Interest Rate

Baltimore, April 6 (AP).—State Insurance Commissioner John B. Gontrum announced today a protest had been lodged with him by Harry Miller, president of the Society of American Policyholders, against what he termed "exorbitant interest rates" exacted by life insurance companies on their policy loans.

Gontrum described the society as a consumer organization striving to get a better deal for life insurance company policyholders through the "increased bargaining power that comes of a membership group."

To charge policyholders 5 or 6 per cent on loans under present-day conditions is little short of scandalous and borders closely on usury," Miller said in his letter of protest.

The letter said:

"For many families today life insurance represents their complete saving and investment program, with the possible exception of defense stamps and bonds. Hemmed in on one side by rising living costs, and on the other by mounting taxes, they consider themselves lucky to be able to meet insurance premiums as they come due.

"Occasionally, due perhaps to some family emerg

Radio coverage of the Kentucky Derby, a C. B. S. exclusive since 1935—with the lone exception of 1937—is to continue an exclusive Columbia sports feature for an additional three years.
C. B. S. has just renewed its contract, which gives it sole broadcast rights to the Churchill Downs classic, for 1943, 1944 and 1945.
C. B. S. microphones are to be at Churchill Downs for the 1942 race, as well. Covering this year's Derby on May 2 for the Nation-wide radio audience is Ted Husing, veteran C. B. S. sports reporter, who is to do the color, and Clem McCarthy, wno gives a trackside description of the race itself. Jimmy Dolan assists. You'll hear the great race over WJSV in Washington from 6:15 to 6:45 p. m.
Husing also is to broadcast a description of the Derby Trials Tuesday, April 28, and bring turf and sports notables to the microphone Thursday and Friday, April 30 and May 1, to preview the Derby. On May 2, the day of the race, Ted goes on the air from 5:45 to 6 p. m., Eastern war time, with last-minute news about the classic, including late scratches.
This is Husing's tenth Derby broadcast for C. B. S. His first Churchill Downs air job was in 1929, when Clyde Van Dusen was the winner. Some of the other famous Derby winners whose triumphs he has described include Gallant Fox. Burgoo King, Broker's Tip and Lawrin.

Stimson Urges Legion of Merit Decoration

Copyright by Chicago Sun

A "token" medal, such as other nations present to important foreigners as a diplomatic gesture and to their own civilians for distinguished service, was proposed to Congress yesterday by Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson. It would be an addition to the existing list of American decorations.

The new medal would be known as the "Legion of Merit." It would be awarded "to those who have distinguished themselves by exceptionally outstanding conduct in the performance of essential services since the declaration of national emergency on September 8, 1939."

United States decorations are now given only for outstanding military service, exceptional instances of gallantry in the face of the enemy, or acts of bravery in peacetime. Within these limits some of them may be given to foreigners.

Stimson recalled that this Government was embarrassed when a group of South American army officers visited the United States last year and tendered decorations from their governments to the Chief of Staff of the United States Army and other high ranking officers.

"They were not so much individual decorations as they were a gesture of warm friendship for the United States as a whole, tendered to its official representatives,'" said the Secretary of War in a letter to Sam Rayburn, Speaker of the House. "But no reciprocation could be made. We were compelled to stand mute, as a nation, because we had nothing to give in return."

Existing United States military decorations are the Congressional Medal of Honor, for acts of gallantry above and beyond the call of duty; the Distinguished Service Cross, for exceptional gallantry in action; the Distinguished Flying Cross, for outstanding feats by military fliers in both war and peacetime; the Distinguished Service Medal, for exceptional service in wartime, not necessarily in combat, and the Soldiers' Medal, usually given for acts of bravery during peace.

Extraordinary heroism of Merchant Marine seamen would be recognized by individual decorations under a bill passed yesterday by the Senate and sent to the House.

Seeks $100,000,000 For Defense Roads

Free Classes In Shorthand, Typing to Open

Free classes in shorthand and typing will open April 13 in Washington vocational schools as part of the national defense training program of the District of Columbia Employment Center, it was announced yesterday by Director Edwin W. Jones.

Registration for the classes will be accepted at 808 E Street Northwest for white students, who will attend either Dennison or Chamberlian School, and at 505 K Street Northwest, for colored students, who will attend either Armstrong or Dunbar High School.

Hours of typing classes will be from 6:30 to 9:30 p. m. and hours for shorthand from 3:30 to 10 p. m. Registrants referred to typing courses must have completed two years of high school and shorthand students must be high school graduates.

Local demands for typists and stenographers are so great, Jones said, students who satisfactorily complete the course should have little difficulty obtaining employment—either in the Government or in private business.

The active file of those who are currently seeking work through the center is lower now, Jones said, than at any other time since the office was organized in 1933. Registrants are down to 15,152, which is a 47.4 per cent decrease from April of last year.

H. J. Mondereau Funeral Rites Held Here

Funeral services for Harvey J. Mondereau, 60, of 1204 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, who died Friday, were held yesterday at Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin Street Northwest, at 11 a. m. Burial will be in Meadville, Pa.

A native of Sugar Lake, Pa., Mr. Mondereau had lived in Washington for the last 16 years. He was a member of the advertising staff of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., until a year ago when he was forced to retire because of ill health.

Earlier he had been in the show business as vaudeville and film actor, director and theater operator. He began his theatrical career as a member of the Bennett-Moultin Stock Company, and later appeared in productions by David Belasco and others. For several years he was an actor and assistant director for the Universal Film Co. at Fort Lee, N. J. At one time he was a movie theater manager in Philadelphia, and he also toured the country with a vaudeville act which he produced and managed.

He was a member of the Masons and of ZemZem Temple of the Mystic Shrine.

Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Nancy F. Mondereau, a sister, Lorena G. Mondereau, and a brother, Leroy Mondereau, all of Washington.

Car Care

By Ed Carl

THIS IS NO TIME FOR AN "AILING" CAR

A car defect, like a human defect, is not isolated—it frequently transfers its "poison" to other parts; gradually wearing down your car's vitality. A weak battery, for instance, may not only cause slow starting—it may indirectly produce wear on pistons, piston rings and cylinders. This is no time for "low-energy" driving. Put your car on our Car Conservation Program today—drive in for a Call Carl check-up. Our "car clinic" will make needed adjustments and give you a report on the exact condition of your car.
